'MISS JENNY' ... on stage at Crystal Palace.

Floor Show Filly Front St. Favorite

By JOHN LEE
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Ogallala—Front Street got an unexpected bonus this season.

The street is Ogallala's Old West tourist attraction, opened late last summer.

It embraces a well-stocked "General Store" of souvenirs, an ever-growing Cowboy Capital Museum with model barber shop and mortuary, the Crystal Palace Saloon serving Red Eye and genuine buffalo burgers, and a stage coach ride to Boot Hill.

Floor Show Bonus

The saloon features a floor show in the evening, and the bonus came in the form of Karen Hansmeier, a college coed soloist in the show.

Last month Karen became Miss Nebraska 1965 at the annual pageant in York and brought the title back to her Front Street job.

The tall blonde was Miss Ogallala last year and started singing in the Crystal Palace later in the summer.

Signed On As Regular

She didn't have any pageant plans this summer and was signed on as a regular in the evening show.

Carol Klingman of Chappell, was selected to represent Ogallala in the state pageant, but then plans started to change.

Carol became ill and went to the hospital instead of to York. The local runners-up were unavailable, so Karen was contacted to represent her home town.

Six Days To Prepare

With a mere six days to prepare, she polished a song she had performed for entertainment at the local contest, went to York and won the coveted title over a field of 36 contestants.

"It still doesn't quite seem real," she admits. The nightly Front Street shows have been exploiting her singing talents, and "I love it," she enthused. "It's the first time I've really gotten a touch of this kind of work."

"Miss Jenny" on the stage, Karen sings solos and dances and flips her skirt in the chorus line of seven talented high school and college girls.

Music Supervisor MC's

Jack Learned, vocal music supervisor of the Grand Island Public Schools, and a former music instructor in the Ogallala schools, directs and MC's the shows to the accompaniment of "Slippery" Harold Buehn on the old-time piano.

The infant program, said Learned, "offers an opportunity to use a lot of talented kids. Otherwise their talent would probably be used to sell shoes or something. This is just a good, clean fun-type show, and the kids work up their own numbers."

For Miss Nebraska its valuable training for her Atlantic City appearance later this summer.

Chance To Test Public

"You have a chance to test the public," she explained. "Every audience is different, and you have to learn to meet them all with a smile."

That doesn't appear to be hard for the attractive Concordia Teachers College junior.

Karen plans to become an elementary school music teacher and is signed up for 17 hours next semester.

Personal appearances in her Miss Nebraska role have now started to cut into her Front Street entertaining career, but "they told me that whenever I'm in town I should come on down and work."

CREEK LEAVES BANKS IN WESTERN NEBRASKA

By The Associated Press

Pumpkin Creek in western Nebraska went out of its banks Tuesday night following heavy rains southwest of Harrisburg where the creek starts.

The rush of water closed Highways 71 and 88 for a period, forced some residents along the creek from their homes and destroyed a trout hatchery at the Lost Park night club 12 miles south of Gering.

At the night club observers estimated the creek, which went over a 10-foot dike in front of the club, was between 15 to 20 feet above normal.

Highway 71 was closed for about two and a half hours 14 miles south of Gering as water three to five feet deep flowed over the road. Highway 81 was closed east of its junction with 71.

One long-time resident along the creek called it the worst flooding she had ever seen on the stream.

The creek drains into the North Platte River five to six miles northeast of Bridgeport and the flood waters were expected to reach that town Wednesday morning.

Sidney had winds up to 83 miles an hour and trees were uprooted throughout the town. About an inch of rain fell during the storm which at one time had winds of around 70 miles an hour for about a 20 minute period.

IN COUNCIL ...

Portions Of City Budget Get Okay

By BOB SCHREFF
Star Staff Writer

The City Council Tuesday evening gave its informal approval to sections of Mayor Dean Petersen's proposed fiscal 1965-66 city budget reviewed during the first of several scheduled budget hearings.

Only minor changes were asked for by the council when considering budget requests by the planning and legal departments, the council's own budget and various divisions under the direction of City Finance Director James Mallon.

Highlights: Planning—Douglas Brogden, director, asked for a total increase of $7,006 in the planning budget. The major increase in the $78,412 request will go for the salary of an additional planner for the next fiscal year.

Slight Reduction

Brogden noted a slight reduction in operation, maintenance and equipment expenditures.

The council decided to cancel the annual contract with Harland Bartholomew, planning consultants, but decided to leave the amount of the fee, $4,000, in the budget for retaining the consultants on a per diem basis as needed and for added expenses for the planning staff.

Legal department—Funds requested for the next fiscal year are more than $5,000 less than the $9,154 received in fiscal 1964-65.

Reduction

Main reduction from last year is the removal of a $5,000 appropriation for professional services and a decrease in requests for new equipment.

City Council—The council decided it would raise the proposed $7,740 budget request by more than $6,000. Included in the increase are $3,000 for professional services, $2,000 for conference, school and travel expense, $1,000 for additional secretarial services and $100 for postage.

The council gave its informal approval to Mallon's request for $100,000 for the contingency fund, the same as last year.

Mallon said the appropriation should be sufficient and that he sees no auditorium or golf deficit.

Also approved were budget requests for other related fiscal divisions: judgments, $10,498; sinking fund, $245,000; interest and coupons, $120,354; Social Security, $79,210 and the police and fire pension fund $318,000.

Dover, England (AP)—Bob Patten, who already has crossed the English Channel in a canoe, a bedstead and a barrel, crossed it Tuesday in a bottle.

It took him 8 hours and 20 minutes aboard the 15-foot steel bottle, powered by an outboard motor. He landed at Cap Gris Nez, where three puzzled French teenagers regarded him cautiously and refused to approach. A motorboat towed him back to Dover.

LBJ CHOICE ... Goldberg shakes President Johnson's hand.

Goldberg Accepts New U.N. Post Reluctantly

Washington (AP)—President Johnson plucked a reluctant Justice Arthur J. Goldberg from the hushed halls of the Supreme Court Tuesday and thrust him into the maelstrom of world politics as ambassador to the United Nations.

"I'd rather the President hadn't asked me to assume this duty, in all candor," Goldberg said after his surprise appointment to succeed the late Adlai E. Stevenson.

He said he agreed to step down from the Supreme Court—"The culmination of everything I could have hoped for in life"—only because the President told him it was his duty.

The White House said Johnson announced the appointment only about an hour after coming to a final decision Tuesday morning to pick Goldberg from among a list of some 30 prominent Americans.

Press Secretary Bill D. Moyers declined to name any of the others considered for the post—the nation's top ambassadorship.

Goldberg, former secretary of labor and before that a noted labor lawyer and mediator, pledged to work for peace through international law.

"It is that or doom—and we all know it," he said at the White House.

While the appointment stirred expressions of surprise in Washington and United Nations headquarters, longtime associates cited Goldberg's record as a labor mediator as a key factor in his selection.

Look For Change

"I would look for a change in the function of the ambassador to the U.N.," said one friend and former close associate of Goldberg.

"Arthur's a negotiator ... there is a great deal of similarity in strike negotiations and international negotiations. Arthur knows more tricks of the trade ... than anyone I know," this source added.

"I leave the court with great sadness and with great regret," Goldberg said at a news conference. "I have spent three of the happiest years of my life there."

Third Man

Goldberg is only the third man in U.S. history to give up a lifetime Supreme Court post to take another appointment. He will now serve at the pleasure of the President.

But, indicating he believed the U.N. post could be an even greater challenge, he said in accepting the appointment.

"It now comes that the President has asked me to join in the greatest adventure of man's history—the effort to bring the rule of law to govern the relations between sovereign states," Goldberg said. "I have accepted, as one simply must."

Goldberg takes a $9,500 yearly salary cut in the $30,000 post, the nation's top ambassadorship.

Liberal Reputation

Some U.N. sources saw Goldberg as a man with a liberal reputation similar to Stevenson's, chosen by Johnson to try to soften criticism of U.S. military intervention in Viet Nam and the Dominican Republic.

There was no immediate comment from Arab delegates on the appointment of Goldberg, a Jew.

But one non-Arab delegate said: "The Arabs are not going to be very happy."

Northwest Area Cities Evacuate

... FLOOD DROWNS BOY

Kansas City (AP)—Devastating floods rolled through many parts of northwest and west central Missouri Tuesday night.

Triggered by two days of torrential rains, which ranged up to 21 inches at one point, the floods forced evacuation of half a dozen cities and towns; inundated valuable farm land and blocked highways and rail lines to the north and east of Kansas City.

There was one known dead. At least seven persons were reported missing.

Damage estimates ran into the millions—$25 million in Clay County alone. The area was designated a disaster area for the purpose of making federal aid available.

Typical of the distressed cities was Smithville, a town of about 2,000 a few miles north of Kansas City.

The usually placid Little Platte River roared out of its banks late Monday. By Tuesday morning it had inundated most of the town as the river went 15 feet above flood stage. The city had suffered $1 million in damage in a flood just a year ago.

Nearly 90% of the residents had to be evacuated as the waters rose to the roof tops of one-story homes.

Officers said the situation was made critical by the refusal of many residents to leave their homes.

"Can't Happen"

"We fought them last year and we fought them this year," said Bill Skinner an official of the Clay County Civil Defense. "They said 'just can't happen again.'"

Rescue boats were rushed in. Many people were taken from the tops of their homes and the roofs of business buildings.

At least four persons were reported missing in the city. Also evacuated during the night were the towns of Mosby, which is on the Fishing River northeast of here, and Tracy, which is on the Platte River to the north.

Three homes just south of Smithville were flooded for the fourth time in three years and the second time in two weeks by Second Creek. The owner of one, Guy Webb, just finished spending $3,000 repairing the damage of the last flood.

Farther to the north the Platte River at Agency reached a record stage of 32 feet and 3 inches—12 feet above flood stage. Boats were rushed in to remove the 300 residents.

Damage was heavy at Rock Port, in the extreme northwest corner of Missouri. It was here that an estimated 13 inches of rain fell Sunday night and 8 more inches Monday night. There was no loss of life there.

Hard Hit

Also hard hit was Excelsior Springs, a resort city, some 30 miles northeast of Kansas City.

Mosby, between Kansas City and Excelsior Springs, was totally submerged, but the 300 living there were moved out.

Harman Crouch, Platte County Civil Defense director ordered complete evacuation of Tracy.

"The way this river is coming," he said, "it's going to take everything."

Boy Drowned

An 11-year-old boy, Michael Henley, Holden, Mo., drowned when a car was swept off a bridge over the Blackwater River. Missing as the result of a rescue attempt were Edward Calloway and Forrest McKeown, whose boats capsized.

Mrs. John Hawk, 42, Easton, Mo., was reported missing after her car was washed from a flooded Platte River bridge near Garrettsburg.

Mosby was completely inundated by the waters from Fishing River. Some residents climbed to the tops of their houses to escape the turbulent waters.

An elderly couple, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Barnes were rescued from a huge mound of earth left by a construction crew. They had spent the night there while the waters swirled around them.

Sorensen Breaks Tie; Votes For Stock Tax

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Lt. Gov. Philip Sorensen broke a 21-21 tie vote Tuesday to hand first stage legislative approval to a bill taxing stock in domestic and foreign domesticated corporations.

The bill, LB30, as amended, offers a broadened intangible tax base as an alternative to the state income tax if the latter is voided by the electorate in a 1966 referendum election.

If the income tax is tossed out, LB30 would take effect on Jan. 1, 1967. If the income tax becomes effective on that date, as scheduled, LB30 would be voided.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff, removes a series of deductions now applied to domestic and foreign domesticated corporations which, in effect, render their stock tax-exempt.

Thus, the four-mill tax levy now applied to stock in foreign corporations would be spread to cover domestic and foreign domesticated companies as well.

Carpenter estimated that the bill would raise an additional $20 million to $30 million, a biennium, all of which would be allocated to the state.

Companion Bill

A companion bill, LB78, reducing the Class A intangible property tax (basically applied against money) from 2.5 mills to one-tenth of a mill, won tentative 21-18 endorsement.

With amendments, LB78 holds the Class B (stocks and bonds) rate at four mills and provides that, in the event LB30 becomes law, the first $8 million in revenue would be distributed to local subdivisions.

This would give counties, cities and school districts the same amount of revenue which they now receive from the intangible property tax, Carpenter said, while allocating all new money to the state.

Attempts Kill

Sen. Clifton Batchelder of Omaha attempted to kill LB30, arguing that "there is no better way of keeping industry out of Nebraska."

The kill effort failed on a 21-21 tie, setting the stage for Sorensen to crack the subsequent deadlock on Carpenter's motion to advance.

The lieutenant governor can only vote in the event of a tie.

LB30 was offered as an alternative to the income tax law upon acceptance of an amendment proposed by Sen. Arnold Ruhnke of Plymouth and presented by Sen. Kenneth Bowen of Red Cloud in Ruhnke's absence.

Carpenter said that the bill will thus provide that "those who advocate a referendum drive to kill the income tax—if successful—will get the intangible tax."

They will find, he said, that "they are not allowed to go scot-free forever. They're never for anything—except to load more on the fellow who is already paying too much."

Sen. Henry Pedersen Jr. of Omaha said the proposal would "take away the incentive for people to invest in domestic corporations," and Sen. Sam Klaver of Omaha warned that it might "chase money out of the state."

Sen. Stanley Matzke of Milford asked: "What about the individual who has his life savings tied up in his farm or in his small business?"

Sen. Ramey Whitney of Chappell suggested that application of the four-mill levy against all stock would be in the interests of "equity and uniformity."

Carpenter noted that the bill would cost him $1,600 a year in taxes on his $400,000 in stock held in Terry Carpenter, Inc., stock which is now tax-free.

"I think I have the responsibility to pay it," he said.

LB78 withstood two amendment efforts. Whitney attempted to increase the Class A rate from one-tenth of a mill to one mill, but was turned down on a 14-18 vote. Klaver's bid to cut the Class B rate in half fell on a 5-35 count.

County officials may, in effect, be violating their oaths of office by using county employees for tasks other than their governmental assignments, Bowen said.

Douglas County Board Chairman John J. Cavanaugh of Omaha has suggested that county employees may be used to go door to door with referendum petitions seeking signatures.

Cavanaugh has been attempting to line up support of other county officials against the income tax law.

It would be, he said, "an unfair and unjust burden on the Douglas County taxpayer."

Sen. Hal Bauer of Lincoln, chief sponsor of the income tax bill, said the referendum drive is becoming more "interesting and unusual."

Inter-ling

Said Bauer: "It is an interesting and unusual nonpolitical, but bipartisan, effort taking place in Omaha, which finds Republican and Democratic leaders joined by the county board chairman who states he is lining up support of county officials against the state income tax."

kill, then did not vote on the motion to advance.

Sen. Rudolf Kokes of Ord did not vote on the motion to kill, then voted to advance. Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings voted to kill, then did not vote to advance.

Only seven of the 26 senators who voted for the income tax voted to kill LB30.

Vote on the motion to advance:

For: Bowen, Carpenter, Carstens, Craft, Grandall, Fleming, Harsh, Hasebrook, Kir, Knight, Kokes, Kravner, Matzke, Payne, E. Rasmussen, Stromer, Striker, Walway, Warner, Whitney, Wyle, Agard, Adamson, Batchelder, Bauer, Brauer, Budd, Danner, Gerdes, Holmquist, Hughes, Klaver, Moulton, Moylan, Nelson, Norr, Orms, Paine, Paxton, Pedersen, Proud, Skarda, Syas, Neil Volgar, Burbach, Clausen, Krumer, Hattner, Marvel, R. Rasmussen, Scholtz.

Referendum Drive Tactics Scored

Speaker of the Legislature Kenneth Bowen of Red Cloud said Tuesday that Douglas County officials "have no business using county employees" to circulate petitions seeking a referendum vote on the state income tax law.

"They ought to tend to their own business," he suggested.

Bowen said the real property tax burden is concentrated at the local level, not for the support of state government.

'Ought To Clean Up'

"They ought to clean up their own backyard and be a little more conservative in their own spending," Bowen said.

Interested individuals should be permitted to distribute petitions, Bowen emphasized, but county employees should not be organized for such a purpose by county officials.

County officials may, in effect, be violating their oaths of office by using county employees for tasks other than their governmental assignments, Bowen said.

Douglas County Board Chairman John J. Cavanaugh of Omaha has suggested that county employees may be used to go door to door with referendum petitions seeking signatures.

Cavanaugh has been attempting to line up support of other county officials against the income tax law.

Said Bauer: "It is an interesting and unusual nonpolitical, but bipartisan, effort taking place in Omaha, which finds Republican and Democratic leaders joined by the county board chairman who states he is lining up support of county officials against the state income tax."

"Board Chairman Cavanaugh states this could involve using county employees going door to door. Possibly the same reasoning that makes placing the income tax on the ballot by referendum a 'nonpolitical' effort justifies use of paid county officials in doing some of the work."

Sen. George Syas of Omaha said he sees nothing wrong with use of Douglas County employees "so long as they do it of their own free will and on their own time."

No citizen, Syas said, should be barred from participation in political activities, including county government employees.

No state law prohibits use of county employees for political activities.

... FLOOD DROWNS BOY

Kansas City (AP)—Devastating floods rolled through many parts of northwest and west central Missouri Tuesday night.

Triggered by two days of torrential rains, which ranged up to 21 inches at one point, the floods forced evacuation of half a dozen cities and towns: inundated valuable farm land and blocked highways and rail lines to the north and east of Kansas City.

There was one known dead. At least seven persons were reported missing.

Damage estimates ran into the millions—$25 million in Clay County alone. The area was designated a disaster area for the purpose of making federal aid available.

Typical of the distressed cities was Smithville, a town of about 2,000 a few miles north of Kansas City.

The usually placid Little Platte River roared out of its banks late Monday. By Tuesday morning it had inundated most of the town as the river went 15 feet above flood stage. The city had suffered $1 million in damage in a flood just a year ago.

Nearly 90% of the residents had to be evacuated as the waters rose to the roof tops of one-story homes.

Officers said the situation was made critical by the refusal of many residents to leave their homes.

"Can't Happen"

"We fought them last year and we fought them this year," said Bill Skinner an official of the Clay County Civil Defense. "They said it 'just can't happen again.'"

Rescue boats were rushed in. Many people were taken from the tops of their homes and the roofs of business buildings.

At least four persons were reported missing in the city. Also evacuated during the night were the towns of Mosby, which is on the Fishing River northeast of here, and Tracy, which is on the Platte River to the north.

Three homes just south of Smithville were flooded for the fourth time in three years and the second time in two weeks by Second Creek. The owner of one, Guy Webb, just finished spending $3,000 repairing the damage of the last flood.

Farther to the north the Platte River at Agency reached a record stage of 32 feet and 3 inches—12 feet above flood stage. Boats were rushed in to remove the 300 residents.

Damage was heavy at Rock Port, in the extreme northwest corner of Missouri. It was here that an estimated 13 inches of rain fell Sunday night and 8 more inches Monday night. There was no loss of life there.

Hard Hit

Also hard hit was Excelsior Springs, a resort city, some 30 miles northeast of Kansas City.

Mosby, between Kansas City and Excelsior Springs, was totally submerged, but the 300 living there were moved out.

Harman Crouch, Platte County Civil Defense director ordered complete evacuation of Tracy.

"The way this river is coming," he said, "it's going to take everything."

Boy Drowned

An 11-year-old boy, Michael Henley, Holden, Mo., drowned when a car was swept off a bridge over the Blackwater River. Missing as the result of a rescue attempt were Edward Calloway and Forrest McKeown, whose boats capsized.

Mrs. John Hawk, 42, Easton, Mo., was reported missing after her car was washed from a flooded Platte River bridge near Garrettsburg.

Mosby was completely inundated by the waters from Fishing River. Some residents climbed to the tops of their houses to escape the turbulent waters.

An elderly couple, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Barnes were rescued from a huge mound of earth left by a construction crew. They had spent the night there while the waters swirled around them.

CREEK LEAVES BANKS IN WESTERN NEBRASKA

By The Associated Press

Pumpkin Creek in western Nebraska went out of its banks Tuesday night following heavy rains southwest of Harrisburg where the creek starts.

The rush of water closed Highways 71 and 83 for a period, forced some residents along the creek from their homes and destroyed a trout hatchery at the Lost Park night club 12 miles south of Gering.

At the night club observers estimated the creek, which went over a 10-foot dike in front of the club, was between 15 to 20 feet above normal.

Highway 71 was closed for about two and a half hours 14 miles south of Gering as water three to five feet deep flowed over the road. Highway 81 was closed east of its junction with 71.

One long-time resident along the creek called it the worst flooding she had ever seen on the stream.

The creek drains into the North Platte River five to six miles northeast of Bridgeport and the flood waters were expected to reach that town Wednesday morning.

Sidney had winds up to 83 miles an hour and trees were uprooted throughout the town. About an inch of rain fell during the storm which at one time had winds of around 70 miles an hour for about a 20 minute period.

Referendum Drive Tactics Scored

Speaker of the Legislature Kenneth Bowen of Red Cloud said Tuesday that Douglas County officials "have no business using county employees to circulate petitions seeking a referendum vote on the state income tax law."

"They ought to tend to their own business," he suggested.

Bowen said the real property tax burden is concentrated at the local level, not for the support of state government.

"Ought To Clean Up"

"They ought to clean up their own backyard and be a little more conservative in their own spending," Bowen said.

Interested individuals should be permitted to distribute petitions, Bowen emphasized, but county employees should not be organized for such a purpose by county officials.

County officials may, in effect, be violating their oaths of office by using county employees for tasks other than their governmental assignments, Bowen said.

Douglas County Board Chairman John J. Cavanaugh of Omaha has suggested that county employees may be used to go door to door with referendum petitions seeking signatures.

Cavanaugh has been attempting to line up support of other county officials against the income tax law. It would be, he said, "an unfair and unjust burden on the Douglas County taxpayer."

Sen. Hal Bauer of Lincoln, chief sponsor of the income tax bill, said the referendum drive is becoming more "interesting and unusual."

'Inter-'ing

Said Bauer: "It is an interesting and unusual nonpolitical, but bipartisan, effort taking place in Omaha, which finds Republican and Democratic leaders joined by the county board chairman who states he is lining up support of county officials against the state income tax."

"Board Chairman Cavanaugh states this could involve using county employees going door to door. Possibly the same reasoning that makes placing the income tax on the ballot by referendum a 'nonpolitical' effort justifies use of paid county officials in doing some of the work."

Sen. George Syas of Omaha said he sees nothing wrong with use of Douglas County employees "so long as they do it of their own free will and on their own time."

No citizen, Syas said, should be barred from participation in political activities, including county government employees.

No state law prohibits use of county employees for political activities.

... VIET NAM STILL SERIOUS

Saigon, Viet Nam (AP)—Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara said Tuesday the Viet Nam situation still is serious, but not all black. This was his summary of a survey aimed at helping the Johnson administration determine the extent of the new U.S. military buildup.

"Over-all, the situation continues to be serious," McNamara told a news conference on the basis of his field trips and Saigon briefings in the last five days. "As a matter of fact, in many aspects there has been deterioration since I was here last, 15 months ago... but the picture is not all black by any means."

McNamara skirted the issue of how many U.S. servicemen may be added to the 75,000 or so already on duty in Viet Nam.

Fulfill Commitment

"Based on my observations and discussions here, we will be making a report to the President at some time within the next few days," he said. "I can only tell you that our recommendations will be directed toward fulfilling the commitment of our nation to support the people of Viet Nam in their fight to win their independence."

Contrasting points of the war as summed up by McNamara:

—The size of the Viet Cong forces has increased; their rate of operations and the intensity of their attacks has been expanded; their disruption of the lines of communications, both rail and sea and road, is much more extensive, and they have intensified their campaign of terror against the civilian population.

—On the other hand, "The Vietnamese people continue to be willing to fight and to be willing to die in their own defense. The Viet Cong, as you know, are suffering increasingly heavy losses and the U.S. combat forces are adding substantially to the military power of the government."

Heads Back

The secretary headed back to Washington with his companions in the fact-finding mission. They included Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Ambassador-designate Henry Cabot Lodge, who is to relieve the retiring Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor in mid-August.

Nationalists Brush Aside Red Defector

Taipei, Formosa (AP)—Nationalist China brushed aside Tuesday the defection of former Vice President Li Tsung-jen to Red China but looked for the Peking Communists to exploit it as a major cold war victory.

Officials declined to talk about the crossover, saying they did not want to lend it undue importance. Li, 74, had been living in self-exile in the United States since 1949 and had been read out of the ruling Kuomintang Party in 1955 after clashing with President Chiang Kai-shek.

Peking's New China News Agency announced Li's arrival in Peking by special plane and said he was greeted at the airport by Premier Chou En-lai and 100 high Communist officials.

The agency reported Li delivered a blast at the United States, saying it was trying to isolate China and dominate the world.

Word of the defection had been in the wind on Formosa for a week. It had been accurately predicted by the Hong Kong correspondent of the Independent newspaper, Chen Hsin Daily News and Li had left the United States for Switzerland July 15 en route to Peking.

The independent English-language China News said in an editorial written before the Peking announcement that Li had been rejected by Chinese people everywhere and called him a frustrated politician and opportunist.

Panel Approves Coleman Nomination

Washington (AP)—James P. Coleman's nomination to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals won 13-2 approval of the Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday in face of vigorous protests against his role as segregationist governor of Mississippi.

The full Senate will vote on the nomination later.

The two senators who voted in committee against confirmation were Sens. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Philip A. Hart, D-Mich. Originally the vote was 11-2 with three committee members not present—Sens. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., Hugh Scott, R-Pa., and George A. Smathers, D-Fla. Later McClellan and Smathers were recorded in favor of the nomination.

Before a three-member subcommittee had unanimously approved President Johnson's selection of Coleman last week, civil rights groups had urged in hearings that he be rejected. The former Mississippi governor was denounced as an avowed segregationist who could not serve fairly on a court that deals with so many important civil rights cases.

5th Circuit

The 5th Circuit, based in New Orleans, handles appeals from Florida, most of Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and the Canal Zone.

The 51-year-old Coleman—who carries 220 pounds on a 6-foot-4 frame—pledged that if he is confirmed he would "do my duty fairly and impartially." He said there was no reason why he could not abide by the Supreme Court's rulings and the acts of Congress "100 per cent."

Coleman said by virtue of decisions of the Supreme Court and acts of Congress since then "separation of individuals by race or color is dead in this country."

Before he testified before the subcommittee, he was endorsed by Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach, one of the rare times that an attorney general has gone before a congressional committee to endorse a judicial nominee.

Katzenbach said that although Coleman had made statements in defense of racial segregation these had to be considered "in the context of the society and the times in which they were made" along with his other acts as governor.

Fiscal Year Deficit Less Than Guess

Washington (AP)—The federal government ended the fiscal year 1965 on June 30 with a deficit of $3.5 billion, $2.8 billion below the estimate of six months ago, the White House announced Tuesday.

Press Secretary Bill D. Moyers described the deficit as the smallest in five years. He said President Johnson was pleased that spending fell below earlier estimates and that receipts exceeded earlier estimates.

Moyers said Johnson feels that "the response of the economy to the tax cuts last year generated the higher profits which resulted in the $3.5 billion rise in revenues over the previous fiscal year."

He said further that Johnson believes the results of the fiscal year ended June 30 justify the earlier conclusion that tax reductions coupled with expenditure restraint was the best way to make progress towards a balanced budget.

Goodbody and Co., owners of the certificates, had entrusted them to a brokerage firm which was transferring them to a Wall Street bank.

The estimate of their worth came from Edwin Sawyer, a Goodbody general partner.

One of the holdup men was described as about 25, stocky and bald, wearing dark slacks and a white shirt. The other wore sunglasses and a dark suit.

The next day the Chilean air force and Argentine navy reported that Chilean, Argentine and British personnel in Antarctica saw a lens-shaped object—"yellowish red, changing to green, yellow and orange"—that affected instruments used to measure magnetic fields.

Another sighting was reported Monday night at Weymouth, Mass.

Advanced Civilization

"The conclusion of the majority of our board of governors and scientific consultants is that these things must be from some advanced civilization," said Keyhoe.

Keyhoe contends the Air Force reached the same conclusion years ago, but has a "high level policy of explaining the sightings away one way or another so as not to scare people."

The summer season got off to a flying start in Europe July 7.

"It was very frightening," said Mrs. Dora Horlock, who, with her husband Harold, spotted a fiery object in the southern sky near Warminster, England.

That same night in Valence, France, Maurice Masse said he saw taking off from his farm an object that resembled a large football with four metal legs. "We don't think it was a gag," said an official.

Sentry Satellites Sent To Seek Nuclear Tests

Cape Kennedy, Fla. (AP)—Two sentry satellites were blasted into the sky Tuesday and headed for outposts in space where they will guard the United States against any sneak violations of the nuclear test ban treaty.

The two 524-pound Vela vehicles, capable of detecting nuclear explosions from the earth's surface out 200 million miles, rode an Atlas-Agena rocket aloft in pre-dawn darkness.

They entered initial orbits ranging from 132 to 69,000 miles high. One was maneuvered into a circular orbit 69,570 miles out Tuesday night and the other into a similar orbit Thursday.

Detects Violations

If they reach their final posts on opposite sides of the earth, their sensitive instruments will be capable of detecting any explosions violating the 1963 test ban treaty.

This treaty, signed by the United States, Russia and more than 100 other nations, prohibits nuclear blasts in the atmosphere, in space or under water. Underground tests are permitted.

A 12-pound pygmy satellite, assigned to study radiation in the Van Allen Belt circling the earth, also rode skyward as a hitchhiker on the Atlas-Agena.

The nuclear detection satellites join four others launched in pairs in 1963 and 1964 and still sending back valuable data. The older satellites have proven their ability to detect events within 200 million miles of earth.

Big Challenge

One of the biggest challenges facing the new Vela twins is telling the difference between an atomic blast and a false alarm which might be set off by a large solar flare or a cosmic ray shower from the sun.

This problem will be a great one in the next few years, for violent storms which occur in 11-year cycles lie ahead on the sun in the next few years.

During this period of peak activity, scientists hope to gather more information about the effect of solar disturbances on satellite instruments.

They also hope to gain additional knowledge of electron clouds discovered by the first pair of Vela satellites on the dark side of the earth. The clouds appeared to be an extension of the earth's magnetic equator. A better understanding of them might help solve some unknowns about the weather and communications problems.

Saigon, Viet Nam (AP)—Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara said Tuesday the Viet Nam situation still is serious, but not all black. This was his summary of a survey aimed at helping the Johnson administration determine the extent of the new U.S. military buildup.

"Over-all, the situation continues to be serious," McNamara told a news conference on the basis of his field trips and Saigon briefings in the last five days. The secretary headed back to Washington with his companions in the fact-finding mission. They included Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Ambassador-designate Henry Cabot Lodge, who is to relieve the retiring Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor in mid-August.

Police were reported holding four suspects, including two young boys, in a bomb plot that appeared to have been aimed at Taylor.

Reliable sources said the instrument was a Claymore bomb, an electrically detonated device that hurls steel pellets like a shotgun. They said police discovered the explosive in a hollow log aimed at the entrance to the Saigon stadium and disarmed it 15 minutes before Taylor and senior Vietnamese officials were due to leave a national unity day rally.

The chief military ground action of the day stemmed from repeated Viet Cong attacks on a government camp manned by 200 Vietnamese special forces troops and six U.S. advisers at Bu Dop, 80 miles due north of Saigon and five miles from the Cambodian frontier.

Gallant Stand

A U.S. spokesman said the garrison fought off the raiders in a gallant stand, but suffered "an awful lot of casualties." Without specifying how many, he said Americans were among the dead.

Armed helicopters and fighter-bombers from the Bien Hoa Air Base, 12 miles northeast of Saigon, helped repel the guerrillas, who had swarmed across a moat and through a mine field to strike at the camp's north wall.

Under attack again for the second day in a row were men of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division's 2nd Brigade, encamped near Bien Hoa. They were harassed by Viet Cong mortar and small arms fire. A spokesman said U.S. casualties were "light." Three men of the brigade were killed in the initial attack Monday.

Saucers Reported In Summer Skies

New York (AP)—Some people around the world say they are seeing more in summer skies than buzzing insects and birds on the wing.

From Antarctica to England come reports of mysterious flying objects zipping through space and, in some reported cases, interfering with electromagnetic equipment.

At least five sightings outside the United States in the past two weeks remain unexplained.

But a glowing object that caused a commotion from Ohio to Maryland turned out to be a runaway Navy balloon launched in Canada.

What are these objects?

Could Be Kite

The Air Force, which has looked into 9,127 reported sightings to date since 1947, says they're usually balloons, birds, searchlights, jet exhausts—or the red and white kite sent up by your neighbor's child.

To date, the Air Force said only 667 remain unidentified. And most of these, it said, could be explained away if more information was made available to its investigative agency, Project Bluebook at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Dayton, Ohio.

The Air Force said its 18 years of investigation has turned up absolutely no evidence to indicate the objects came from space.

Disagreeing with the Air Force is Maj. Donald E. Keyhoe, a retired Marine pilot

Cape Kennedy, Fla. (AP)—Two sentry satellites were blasted into the sky Tuesday and headed for outposts in space where they will guard the United States against any sneak violations of the nuclear test ban treaty.

The two 524-pound Vela vehicles, capable of detecting nuclear explosions from the earth's surface out 200 million miles, rode an Atlas-Agena rocket aloft in pre-dawn darkness.

They entered initial orbits ranging from 132 to 69,000 miles high. One was maneuvered into a circular orbit 69,570 miles out Tuesday night and the other into a similar orbit Thursday.

Detects Violations

If they reach their final posts on opposite sides of the earth, their sensitive instruments will be capable of detecting any explosions violating the 1963 test ban treaty.

This treaty, signed by the United States, Russia and more than 100 other nations, prohibits nuclear blasts in the atmosphere, in space or under water. Underground tests are permitted.

A 12-pound pygmy satellite, assigned to study radiation in the Van Allen Belt circling the earth, also rode skyward as a hitchhiker on the Atlas-Agena.

The nuclear detection satellites join four others launched in pairs in 1963 and 1964 and still sending back valuable data. The older satellites have proven their ability to detect events within 200 million miles of earth.

Big Challenge

One of the biggest challenges facing the new Vela twins is telling the difference between an atomic blast and a false alarm which might be set off by a large solar flare or a cosmic ray shower from the sun.

This problem will be a great one in the next few years, for violent storms which occur in 11-year cycles lie ahead on the sun in the next few years.

During this period of peak activity, scientists hope to gather more information about the effect of solar disturbances on satellite instruments.

They also hope to gain additional knowledge of electron clouds discovered by the first pair of Vela satellites on the dark side of the earth. The clouds appeared to be an extension of the earth's magnetic equator. A better understanding of them might help solve some unknowns about the weather and communications problems.

Most Volunteers Eager To Learn, Find Work

Omaha (UPI)—Twenty of the first Women Job Corps volunteers here have completed the first stage of their specialized training in connection with President Johnson's war on poverty.

Omaha is one of five Women's Job Corps Centers operated under the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Tuesday the enrollees at the center—located in a converted downtown hotel—met news reporters and photographers for the first time.

Most of them admitted to having been extremely homesick in their first few days in a large city far removed from home. Adding to the confusion of the initial period was their return to the classroom in their efforts to better prepare for a wide variety of jobs after they leave the center.

Most of the girls lack a solid educational background, but most appear eager to learn, get out on their own and become productive members of society.

Many Are Dropouts

Their ambitions vary as much as their backgrounds. Most are high school dropouts from various parts of the country. During interviews with reporters some expressed a desire to go into social work, while others chose nursing, dress designing, or office work.

Typically, they talked a lot about telephone calls, mail calls, and going home for Christmas.

James Juroe, community relations director, said some of the girls will not return home to their old environment after completion of training. Many have already expressed a desire to remain here and work.

Juroe said the Jobs Corps Center is attempting to train the enrollees to be productive individuals, who will go out on their own with the capability of getting and holding a job.

At the end of the training period, Juroe said, each girl will leave the center with the name of at least one person interested in interviewing her for a job.

A girl's training begins with the pre-vocational period during which she is given practical exposure to different types of jobs. The girl chooses the area she is most interested in and begins practical training.

She attends classes Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in classrooms at the center, where she also lives.

The basic education includes reading, arithmetic, social studies and English. Occupational and educational training courses are also offered.

The classes average seven to 10 girls. Median schooling of the enrollees is a seventh or eighth grade education.

Juroe said, "This is not a placement bureau, nor a giveaway program. We try to fan the spark and make a productive individual out of each girl."

163 At Center

He said the "acid test" will come when the girls complete training and leave the center.

There are 163 girls in the Omaha center and a total of 335 are anticipated by September.

Each girl is given government issue clothing—outmoded WAVE uniforms including black oxfords. The skirts, blouses, shorts and slacks are altered by the clothing classes. None of the girls is required to wear any of the issued clothing.

Blast Damages Deerfield Plant

Deerfield, Kan. (AP)—A gas company plant near here was heavily damaged by an explosion and fire Monday night. No one was injured in the blast.

Deerfield is 16 miles west of Garden City.

The district superintendent for the Kansas-Nebraska Gas Co., Hank Wagner, said he would fly from Hastings, Neb., to assess the damage. Wagner said the plant might be shut down for sometime.

Tourists Plan Ahead

Warsaw (AP)—Thirty thousand foreign tourists already are seeking to visit Poland next May for the celebration of 1,000 years of Christianity, tourist industry officials said.

Pope Paul VI reportedly has been invited, but officials said a papal visit is highly unlikely because of poor church-state relations.

Smith Receives Promotion

Elbert H. Smith, left, a Lexington attorney, was promoted to brigadier general in the Nebraska Army National Guard at a recruiting banquet in North Platte. Pinning on the new star was Major General Lyle A. Welch, Nebraska adjutant general. General Smith started with the Nebraska Guard in 1927 and was mobilized with the guard in 1940 while serving as Dawson County attorney. He held the rank of colonel when he was released from active duty in 1946. Following the war General Smith was a principal advisor to the adjutant general on the reorganization of the guard.

Columbus Wholesale Sales Volume Up 271% In 5 Years

The cities of Columbus, Lincoln and Fremont enjoyed the greatest increases in wholesale sales in Nebraska from 1958 to 1963, a University of Nebraska business report said Tuesday.

The report said the wholesale sales volume in Columbus during the five year period increased a whopping 271%, from about $7.5 million to nearly $28 million, pushing Columbus from 15th to 7th among Nebraska cities in total wholesale sales volume.

Lincoln enjoyed a 69% increase in wholesale business during the period, and Fremont racked up a 50% increase.

Dr. E. S. Wallace, director of the university's Bureau of Business Research, said the Columbus sales increase, which he termed "remarkable," appears to have resulted from a burst of activity by manufacturers' branch offices, petroleum bulk plants, merchandise brokers and assemblers of farm products.

Of the top 10 cities ranked by sales volume, only Scottsbluff and Hastings suffered declines in wholesale sales activity during the period, with Scottsbluff dropping by $8.7 million in annual sales, and Hastings sinking by $1.6 million.

The top 10 in 1963 according to volume were Omaha, Lincoln, Norfolk, Grand Island, Fremont, McCook, Columbus, Kearney, Scottsbluff and Hastings.

Wheat Harvest Rolls Northward

The State Labor Department said the wheat harvest has moved north into Deuel and Cheyenne Counties where yields are varying from four to 30 bushels an acre.

The department said there are more than 100 surplus combines in the area. A harvest office opened in Kimball Tuesday.

There is also a surplus of both men and machines in the Alliance area, where there has been little harvest activity to date.

McNamara's Escort Jets Hit Viet Cong

Honolulu (AP)—U.S. Air Force jets swooped down on a Communist Viet Cong command post in South Viet Nam Tuesday, giving visiting Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara a birdseye view of the operation.

The story of the attack was told Tuesday at Pacific Air Forces headquarters, Hickam Air Force Base, shortly after McNamara arrived in Honolulu for a brief conference with Pacific military command officials. He was on his way back to Washington from Saigon.

The headquarters spokesman said the defense secretary, with Gen. William C. Westmoreland, head of U.S. forces in South Viet Nam, was returning to Tan Son Nhut in an Air Force T39 sabreliner from a visit to Da Nang when their fighter escort of F100 supersabres peeled off to lash the Viet Cong post with bombs and rockets.

The McNamara plane remained safely out of range, and was fully covered by fighter protection, the Air Force said, but the defense secretary nevertheless got a ringside view of the attack.

The F100s dived out of a setting sun and hit the Viet Cong target in two separate sorties, the second involving 20mm cannon fire aimed at the fleeing Communist guerrillas.

McNamara and Westmoreland complimented the aviators upon landing at Saigon later in the day.

Holdrege Helping NU In Medical Research

Holdrege (AP)—The University of Nebraska College of Medicine and the Phelps County Medical Society are co-operating in a search for the presence of a special disease in the Holdrege community.

The disease, called histoplasmosis, is caused by a fungus which produces spores carried by the wind. The study is also being supported by the regional field station, Communicable Disease Center, of Kansas City, Kan.

Testing of persons for the disease is to be done throughout July and August and will also be done in Omaha and Kansas City as well as in Holdrege. It will employ the use of a skin test, something like the Shick test used in grade schools for the detection of diphtheria. In some cases a small amount of blood is drawn from the arm. All human testing is voluntary and limited to those normally seeking medical service here. Samples of soil will also be gathered to learn whether or not the organism is growing here.

Resembles TB. The disease resembles tuberculosis in certain aspects. Before 1945 little was known about histoplasmosis, but by 1957 it was estimated that about one-sixth of the population of the U.S. had been infected. As far as medical science knows the disease cannot be transmitted from person to person. Physicians believe that persons are infected only by inhaling spores in the air. The organism is apt to be found in soil covered by the dung of chickens and various birds. The increase in the startling population has been associated with recent small epidemics of histoplasmosis.

Children and senior citizens appear to be the most severely affected by the disease. Doctors say it can be treated and is usually curable.

Frank Brewster of Holdrege, University of Nebraska College of Medicine junior, is working in the microbiology department this summer, conducting research in the histoplasmosis study. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. F. Wayne Brewster of Holdrege.

Midwest Getting 'Short Changed' Declares Callan

Washington (AP)—Rep. Clair Callan, D-Nebr., declared there should be more dispersion of federal government facilities, contending the middle west is being "short changed."

"Wherever possible, government facilities of all kinds such as defense, scientific and administrative, should be spread out over the United States," Callan told a reporter.

Large amounts of money are interested in government facilities in the Washington, D.C., Maryland and Virginia area as well as other areas along the east coast and in California, he said.

"There is far more than in the Midwest," he added. "There is just no comparison. The middle west is being short changed."

West Lincoln Well Salty? Await Report

The Village of West Lincoln, seeking an independent water supply, sunk a test well at the west end of 3rd St. Monday afternoon and Village Board Chairman Curtis Jensen Tuesday confirmed the possibility that the well may have produced salt water.

Jensen said he is still awaiting the engineer's report on the well and could not say definitely if salt water was found.

One report said salt water was hit 140 feet down. Jensen could not say if the report were true, but "I suspect it is," he said.

The engineer's report is due Wednesday.

Wheat Harvest

Rolls Northward

The State Labor Department said the wheat harvest has moved north into Deuel and Cheyenne Counties where yields are varying from four to 30 bushels an acre.

The department said there are more than 100 surplus combines in the area. A harvest office opened in Kimball Tuesday.

There is also a surplus of both men and machines in the Alliance area, where there has been little harvest activity to date.

McNamara's Escort Jets Hit Viet Cong

Honolulu (AP)—U.S. Air Force jets swooped down on a Communist Viet Cong command post in South Viet Nam Tuesday, giving visiting Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara a birdseye view of the operation.

The story of the attack was told Tuesday at Pacific Air Force headquarters, Hickam Air Force Base, shortly after McNamara arrived in Honolulu for a brief conference with Pacific military command officials. He was on his way back to Washington from Saigon.

The headquarters spokesman said the defense secretary, with Gen. William C. Westmoreland, head of U.S. forces in South Viet Nam, was returning to Tan Son Nhut in an Air Force T39 sabreliner from a visit to Da Nang when their fighter escort of F100 supersabres peeled off to lash the Viet Cong post with bombs and rockets.

The McNamara plane remained safely out of range, and was fully covered by fighter protection, the Air Force said, but the defense secretary nevertheless got a ringside view of the attack.

The F100s dived out of a setting sun and hit the Viet Cong target in two separate sorties, the second involving 20mm cannon fire aimed at the fleeing Communist guerrillas.

McNamara and Westmoreland complimented the aviators upon landing at Saigon later in the day.

Holdrege Helping NU In Medical Research

Holdrege (AP)—The University of Nebraska College of Medicine and the Phelps County Medical Society are co-operating in a search for the presence of a special disease in the Holdrege community.

The disease, called histoplasmosis, is caused by a fungus which produces spores carried by the wind. The study is also being supported by the regional field station, Communicable Disease Center, of Kansas City, Kan.

Testing of persons for the disease is to be done throughout July and August and will also be done in Omaha and Kansas City as well as in Holdrege. It will employ the use of a skin test, something like the Shick test used in grade schools for the detection of diphtheria. In some cases a small amount of blood is drawn from the arm. All human testing is voluntary and limited to those normally seeking medical service here. Samples of soil will also be gathered to learn whether or not the organism is growing here.

Resembles TB
The disease resembles tuberculosis in certain aspects. Before 1945 little was known about histoplasmosis, but by 1957 it was estimated that about one-sixth of the population of the U.S. had been infected. As far as medical science knows the disease cannot be transmitted from person to person. Physicians believe that persons are infected only by inhaling spores in the air. The organism is apt to be found in soil covered by the dung of chickens and various birds. The increase in the startling population has been associated with recent small epidemics of histoplasmosis.

Children and senior citizens appear to be the most severely affected by the disease. Doctors say it can be treated and is usually curable.

Frank Brewster of Holdrege, University of Nebraska College of Medicine junior, is working in the microbiology department this summer, conducting research in the histoplasmosis study. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. F. Wayne Brewster of Holdrege.

Midwest Getting 'Short Changed' Declares Callan

Washington (AP)—Rep. Clair Callan, D-Nebr., declared there should be more dispersion of federal government facilities, contending the middle west is being "short changed."

"Wherever possible, government facilities of all kinds such as defense, scientific and administrative, should be spread out over the United States," Callan told a reporter.

Large amounts of money are interested in government facilities in the Washington, D.C., Maryland and Virginia area as well as other areas along the east coast and in California, he said.

"There is far more than in the Midwest," he added. "There is just no comparison. The middle west is being short changed."

Rights Of The Citizen

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

You can sing about sidewalks if they are in New York but in Lincoln you have to frown on them. It is too bad because a sidewalk is a kind of good thing. When a child, you play on the sidewalk, first with a tricycle and then with roller skates. Then, you spend a few years during which sidewalks are of little concern to you. And finally, you come to those years in life when you get too little exercise and the sidewalks are a place where you can remedy the situation by walking.

But in Lincoln, people seem to have something against sidewalks. The City Council is tormented with the challenge of producing a sidewalk policy that will get the job done and yet not bring too many objections. The city officials who first permitted developments without sidewalks ought to be marched down the middle of a major arterial at high noon. Or better yet, at 7:40 a.m. or 5 p.m. One wonders why the city continues to fight the sidewalk problem. Why not just order sidewalks in along every paved street in the city and then the problem would be solved.

This is said in all seriousness because there really is no excuse for not having sidewalks. The reason we have a sidewalk problem is because our policy is one of equivocation. When you let one property owner off the hook, you give another property owner an excuse to argue with you.

If sidewalk construction everywhere in Lincoln was an absolute requirement the problem would completely disappear from the scene and nothing more would ever be heard of it. No one would be hurt by such a law and many benefits would ensue.

The better problem for the City Council to concern itself with is the location of sidewalks. The standard sidewalk line is a good one but it can produce problems in established areas. When we have sidewalk exceptions, they should be in regards to the sidewalk line, not the walk itself. Why a sidewalk cannot curve around a tree, for instance, is something we have never been able to understand. Despite the pace of life today, sidewalks still are not high speed raceways. We don't walk any faster these days than we did 50 years ago and no one has yet come out with rocket powered roller skates or jet propelled tricycles. A sidewalk that curved could even be an aesthetic attraction. The big problem comes when people want to place the sidewalk along the curb line.

This kind of sidewalk has been permitted in the past but they should be ruled out in the future. They offer too little safety to the pedestrian, particularly older people who could stumble into the street and into the line of an oncoming car and youngsters who, in playing, could do the same thing. It would seem that a minimum of at least two feet should be established between the sidewalk and the curb. The standard sidewalk line is four feet from the property line but exceptions to this could be made for the cause of existing landscaping or unusual land contour. For further protection, exceptions might be limited only to non-arterial streets.

The central issue in regards to sidewalks is the conflict that is often found between the public interest and the interest of the individual. It is this issue that gives the city fits in many areas such as utilities, paving, etc. Paving, particularly, can be a tough issue to deal with.

As it now stands, paving cannot be ordered in by the city except on arterials and in the general downtown area without the approval of more than 50 percent of the abutting property owners. This is generally a good policy but it, too, has its weaknesses.

For instance, it can result in just one single block of dirt road in an area that is paved for miles in all directions. Thus, a very few people are permitted to contribute to the inconvenience of many and to detract from the appearance of a large area. Calvert Street, for instance, was just opened from 33rd east across the Rock Island tracks. The street, however, is gravel. The situation would be a deplorable one, except for one thing. The gravel is only temporary and the street will be paved next year. By then, a substantial dirt fill for the street just east of the tracks will have settled to make a good roadbed.

Because of the cost of paving, it is more of a problem than sidewalks but isolated, unpaved streets are a liability that deserve some thought. The rights of the individual citizen are not to be trampled on but neither should they be allowed to interfere with the well-being and happiness of others.

One Holdout Can Hurt

New U.N. Ambassador

President Johnson confounded the speculators with his appointment of Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg as ambassador to the United Nations to succeed Adlai E. Stevenson. Too, the President may have made in Goldberg one of the most outstanding appointments of his administration.

The obvious shortcoming with Goldberg is his lack of a diplomatic background. He has not dealt in any way in international affairs and will undoubtedly find this lack of experience troublesome. But he brings to the U.N. from and for the United States other qualities that will be invaluable.

That he has a keen mind is granted by all. That he has a dominating sense of justice and an abiding faith in democracy is doubted by none. Where could such qualities be of greater value than in the United Nations?

His faith in the rule of law and his powers of analysis and reasoning will give him the tools he needs to deal with the major powers of the world. His sense of justice, his belief in the equality of all mankind and his dedication to freedom are characteristics that should appeal to the smaller nations of the world.

With his background, Goldberg stands as the epitome of what the United Nations is supposed to be. In accepting the appointment by Johnson, Goldberg said that the task ahead is to apply the rule of law among sovereign nations. It is that or doom, he said, and we all know it.

It is the hope of the U.N. to replace the caprice and tyranny of men with dignity, understanding and respect. In his years as legal counsel for organized labor, as head of the Labor Department and as a Supreme Court justice, this has been the philosophy practiced by Goldberg. He fits his appointment admirably and should come to fulfill it with distinction.

The GOP Problem

Rep. John Lindsay, a nominal Republican who is considered the white hope to capture the New York mayorship from the Democrats, is not proving to be the beau ideal of his party.

Mr. Lindsay recently rebuffed former President Eisenhower's advice and let it be known that the farther the national Republicans remained from New York during his campaign the better he would like it.

In making his try he is up against basic 3 to 1 odds against being elected. The Democrats are very strong in New York City. He needs Democratic votes and, of himself, is a man who might get enough of them. His political actions have more closely paralleled Democratic thinking than the thinking of his party organization. It is only natural that he believes that a strong Republican image would be a detriment.

This Was To Be A Drought Year

No one can guess the weather. A few months ago there were fears of a drought in Nebraska. It had a great deal to do with planning the corn production. And the wheat crop looked bad.

Then as Nebraska was on the verge of being declared a drought area it began to rain. And it has rained ever since. Many areas have already surpassed their 10 year average and there is almost a half a year to go.

We never were farther wrong. But we are learning that just the right amount of rain at the right moment is the desired thing.

Now we are getting crop losses, not from drought but from over-moisture. The weekly crop report says that the wheat harvest is only 70 percent finished. At this time last year it was 90 percent finished. Moreover, black rust is cutting production. And weeds have grown so rapidly that some fields have been wind-rowed.

Corn is in all stages of development, depending upon when it was planted. The replanted fields are not growing as they should. Yet fields nearby that survived the early moisture are in tassel. We may be cutting a higher than normal percent for fodder this year.

But it still looks like a good year for agriculture. The coming two weeks will make most of the corn and that will end the year's fear of drought.

Cattle prices have been restored and beef offers promise of profit. Hog prices are the best in years. We've got the stock and plenty of feed.

But as we say, no one is yet able to foretell the season and this year has been a prime example of that.

Both Russia, China Eye African Prize

WASHINGTON — The lady who was talking with Adlai Stevenson when he was stricken in the streets of London, Ambassador Marietta Tree, had recently returned from a remarkable UN mission to Africa.

It was a trip which she didn't want to take, partly because of the expense involved, partly because it was calculated to embarrass the United States at the hands of such potent communists as Chou En-lai of Red China and Deputy Foreign Minister Yakov Malik of Russia.

Mrs. Tree is American representative on "The Committee of 24," a UN group charged with aiding the new, independent nations of Africa, and the trip to Africa was to check on the sale to South Africa of American arms which allegedly had been resold to White Rhodesians for use against the new Negro republic of Zambia, once Northern Rhodesia.

"Who is going to pay for the trip?" Mrs. Tree asked Ambassador Federenko, Russian envoy to the UN, when the junket was first proposed. "The United Nations," he replied.

"That means the United States will be paying the major portion of the bill."

"But the United States is such a wealthy nation," smirked Federenko. "I thought Russia boasted about its great economic growth and Gross National Product," Ambassador Tree shot back.

"Be careful or a big red bear will come out and get you," leered the Russian.

"Mr. Federenko," inquired the lady ambassador, "are you trying to scare me?" Federenko shut up.

Before leaving New York, Marietta Tree told her friend Averell Harriman in the State Department in Washington that perhaps a more experienced diplomat should go along; so the State Department finally sent retiring Ambassador Philip Bonsal along. He reported later that his presence was unnecessary; Mrs. Tree did a terrific job on her own.

The Russians considered the African trip so important that they delegated the former ambassador to London, now deputy foreign minister, Yakov Malik, as head of their mission; though when it became known that premier Chou En-lai was coming to East Africa simultaneously, Malik went back to Moscow. Apparently he didn't want to be dwarfed by the second highest man in Red China.

Most significant conclusion gained from the trip was that the rivalry between the two most powerful countries in the communist world is becoming more deadly than ever. Both China and Russia are bidding for the vast, unpopulated wealth of Africa.

When Tanzania, the new country which united Tanganyika and the island of Zanzibar, gave a state dinner for Chou En-lai in Dar Es Salaam, the Russian delegation was excluded.

That night, while Chou was being toasted by President Julius Nyerere, Russian Ambassadors Mendelevic and Shakov, the latter being the Soviet delegate to the Committee of 24, dined at the Indian embassy with Mrs. Tree. Russia, the United States and India were excluded from the Chinese-Tanzania festivities.

Watusi And Frug Accepted By Red Youth, Not The Party

NEW YORK — The kids in Soviet Russia are dancing the Watusi and the Frug — and the party is so angry it is doing the psychological twist.

Can't say that I blame them, either. I mean, what good is a totalitarian government if it can't control the chassiss of its youth? And it is absurd for a country that doesn't even allow freedom of speech to allow freedom of stereophonic cacophony. Besides, there are nasty political overtones:

Africa begat the Watusi (Africans have danced it for centuries), and the Watusi begat the Frug. Now, if Russia had gotten the Watusi direct from Africa, it possibly would have accepted it. If only for propaganda reasons. But the West got the Watusi first (bully wooley for our side), and the Reds see red every time they think of it. You can bet your boots the Soviets are clamping down on their youth this very moment; in communist China, it is rumored, they are "thinking again of binding the feet of their babies to assure that such western tribal rituals as the Monkey never get entrenched there."

It is difficult to say how Moscow can stamp out the stomping of the kids this time, but they always find a way.

I remember a few years back the grisly story of one Mile. Irma Vilde. A writer. This lady had the foolhardy courage to write a story, which was published in the Ukrainian newspaper, Pravda Ukrainy, in which she claimed that "There are no greater enemies than husband and wife" in Russia.

She went on to write that, in her opinion, marital discord of the worst kind was caused by "job nervousness aroused by the incorrect attitudes of superiors to subordinates." She said that, beyond job tensions, marital unhappiness is caused by the continuing housing shortage, by jealousy, the division of working husbands and wives, and by vodka.

Well! The Soviets were red hot. In "Party Life" (a magazine which is not nearly as gay as it sounds), the organization struck back by saying Mile. Vilde's complaints were completely without foundation and that she didn't know the facts of collective family life.

No one ever revealed what happened to Mile. Vilde, but there is a rumor that she was given the severest possible punishment.

The party appointed her husband to edit her copy.

Even in America, men don't understand women.

It is not such a difficult problem, men, if you relax and open your mind. It also helps if you open your wallet, but this is not always necessary.

Women are so often misunderstood because they operate under the international femme code, which specifies that any female is entitled to set broad, sweeping rules of behavior for the world, but is privileged to exempt herself from following them.

Colombia On The Way Down

BOGOTA. Colombia—The Alliance for Progress has come to all but a full stop here in Colombia where, at the outset, the prospects seemed so bright. While it is hard to separate cause and effect, the government of the country is at the same time lapsing into a state of near paralysis. Unemployment is rapidly rising. The flight of capital continues, despite measures intended to stop it. Foreign exchange is all but exhausted and the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the U.S. Administration for International Development are saying a stern no to impassioned pleas for help.

Yet hope springs eternal that when things get bad enough, when the prospect is for bloodshed, breakdown, complete anarchy in the country, Washington will come to the rescue.

Last December when the situation was not quite so desperate, an aid loan bailed out the government. Of that loan $10,000,000 is blocked despite the earnest petitions of President Guillermo 'Leon' Valencia who has been unable or unwilling to enforce austerity and who has only just now, after several attempts, found someone willing to take the thankless job of minister of finance. The American intervention in the Dominican Republic underwrote the hopes of those who cling to the conviction that if the worse comes to the worst and if the worst can be shown to be communist-created, the Marines will be sent in.

A report from an American source, saying that plans were in readiness for the occupation of Colombia as the Dominican Republic had been occupied, made big headlines. Despite official denials, this put new life in the conviction that a reprieve could be counted on.

As one of the harassed Americans trying to bring some order out of the mess put it: "For us the Dominican crisis could not have come at a worse time."

Yet in the long view, the eruption in Santo Domingo is comparatively unimportant when put alongside the dilemma of Colombia and, for that matter, much of Latin America. It is simply that the frame of political and economic reference is far too narrow. What worked in a genteel way in the first part of this century is unworkable in the 1960s, with an exploding population and a revolution not of rising expectations but rising demands.

Bogota was once known as the Athens of South America. A cultivated and, on the whole, enlightened elite governed responsibly with a caste system firmly fixed so there was rarely trouble from the lower orders. President Valencia, the son of one of Colombia's great poets, is a representative of that elite. But he finds himself helpless in the face of inexorable demands calling for skills, disciplines, techniques beyond the capacity of a 19th century government and a 19th century political system.

Following the outbreak of violence in 1948 in Bogota, which occurred in the middle of an Inter-American conference when Gen. George C. Marshall, as Secretary of State, headed the American delegation, came nearly a decade of bloodshed. In the countryside the liberals and conservatives carried on a Kentucky-type feud that cost up to 100,000 lives. This ended with agreement for a national front to last 16 years under which liberal and conservative presidents would alternate every four years. That, in effect, suspended the nation's political strife. But it did not bring vigorous or popular government. Valencia, a conservative, finds it difficult or impossible to get a two-thirds vote in the Congress required under the state of siege he declared some time ago.

Conspicuously on the left, splinter parties are breaking away from the national front. The population of Colombia has doubled in less than 20 years and today half of the population is under 20 years old. This poses an enormous task of education, training, the creation of new jobs. As a foreign observer put it to a leading Colombian politician: "It means that what you have to do in five to ten years is double all the facilities that were created in the 400 years since the Spaniards came here."

Even for a strong government with a viable economy, plus American help, that is a prospect so overwhelming as to create a sense of despair and defeat. If anyone knows the answer, this reporter in interviews with Colombians in and out of the government, has not heard it. President Valencia, who is said to weep when he talks of his frustrations, reportedly will impose some form of currency control to stop the drain of dollars flowing to America. But this requires administrative techniques that seem beyond the government. Bankers and industrialists fear that such an attempt widely evaded will make the situation worse.

Others talk of a military take-over in the near future, but the Colombian military is not of the "man on horseback" school, having, it is said, an inherent respect for civilian government. And as a leading banker put it: "They are not likely to take over a bankrupt government confronted by problems which they certainly do not know how to solve."

The sad commentary is that Colombia is potentially rich in resources. If it were not for a dispute with cabinet ministers in charge of petroleum and minerals, American oil companies would like to exploit a promising strike in Putumayo in the South, eventually carrying the oil by pipe line across the Andes to the coast. Iron ore and coal are in plentiful supply and large areas of fertile land could be framed with an expenditure of capital and strong governmental direction.

U.S. aid loans already made and technical assistance — the total for three years through 1964 was just under $340,000,000 — still go on. But it is a long way from that brave moment when President Kennedy, visiting here in December, 1961, cheered the Alianza Para El Progreso in a speech that drew a wildly fervent response.

South Africa Figures In World Strategy

The African nations in UN are divided on most problems confronting them as they are drawn perforce deeper and deeper from the comparative isolation of colonial rule into the toils of high-powered, dog-eat-dog international diplomacy. But on one issue—in or out of UN—they are united in a solid front: A hard-bitten crusade to force the government of South Africa to abandon its racial policy of apartheid.

Periodically the hot heads and dictators among them call for naval blockades and total embargoes in economic and diplomatic relations with South Africa. At times over the past year or so, peanut dictators like Ben Bella of Algeria and Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana have threatened to send expeditionary forces against South Africa. But they have been overruled in both UN and the Organization of African unity, and not even leftist states like Mali and Guinea intend to put their trust and military resources at the disposal of notorious adventurers.

A basic reason for African failure to enlist non-communist nations in even a diplomatic pressure campaign to oust the nationalist regime in South Africa is rooted in the fact that no single African has yet come forward with the answer as to what is to replace the rule of law after those now in power have been replaced. Is there to be blood and violence as there has been in the Congo? Are the Africans willing to exchange the white supremacy rule for a radical and inexperienced "black supremacy" regime? Are they so blind in their hatred of the South African government as to be willing to risk chaos in the land and invite communist coups?

The issue of apartheid is to the Africans—and the Asians as well — the keystone of all things in the future. But to the Western powers, who have denounced apartheid without offering encouragement or help on economic embargoes and diplomatic freezes, the bitterness and tension accruing in and out of UN is something that cannot be dismissed lightly from the standpoint of world strategic calculations and on effects of maintaining peace.

There is also the acute problem of preventing the prospect of a racial confrontation between anti-communist whites on the one hand and Africans accepting Communist help and especially arms on the other. That is what happened in both southeast Asian, Mideast and Latin American areas and caused escalating violence and bloodshed.

The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace took a long and thorough view at the whole apartheid problem in South Africa. In an inch-thick report on conclusions arrived at by four experts in international affairs seated at different American universities, the problem generated by African crusading against apartheid is pointed up in this way:

"South Africa has a more particular strategic significance to the West—particularly to the United States and Britain — quite apart from the role the dispute over apartheid may have with respect to the general western or Communist positions in Africa. In part this significance derives from the position South Africa occupies on the Cape route between Europe and the Far East—especially important in any crisis in which the use of the Suez canal might be denied or dangerous."

The Carnegie report, which offers no conclusions or solutions in South Africa, adds: "In part the Republic's strategic importance stems from the position of Africa as the western boundary of the Indian Ocean. Should there develop in the Indian ocean area fairly large-scale and widespread operations, and should the West be denied access to such bases as Aden, Singapore or Hong Kong, South Africa on the West and Australia on the East might provide the only available alternate advance bases. Because of the greater U.S. capability in long-range air transport, the U.S. would be less handicapped in these circumstances than the British."

"The United States maintains installations of a different sort in South Africa. Located there are missile-tracking and deep space probe stations, used in part by the Atlantic missile tracking station, complementing these is a communications network which plays an important role in controlling commercial and military sea traffic in the Indian and South Atlantic Oceans."

an aesthetic attraction. The big problem comes when people want to place the sidewalk along the curb line.

This kind of sidewalk has been permitted in the past but they should be ruled out in the future. They offer too little safety to the pedestrian, particularly older people who could stumble into the street and into the line of an oncoming car and youngsters who, in playing, could do the same thing. It would seem that a minimum of at least two feet should be established between the sidewalk and the curb. The standard sidewalk line is four feet from the property line but exceptions to this could be made for the cause of existing landscaping or unusual land contour. For further protection, exceptions might be limited only to non-arterial streets.

The central issue in regards to sidewalks is the conflict that is often found between the public interest and the interest of the individual. It is this issue that gives the city fits in many areas such as utilities, paving, etc. Paving, particularly, can be a tough issue to deal with.

As it now stands, paving cannot be ordered in by the city except on arterials and in the general downtown area without the approval of more than 50 percent of the abutting property owners. This is generally a good policy but it, too, has its weaknesses.

For instance, it can result in just one single block of dirt road in an area that is paved for miles in all directions. Thus, a very few people are permitted to contribute to the inconvenience of many and to detract from the appearance of a large area. Calvert Street, for instance, was just opened from 33rd east across the Rock Island tracks. The street, however, is gravel. The situation would be a deplorable one, except for one thing. The gravel is only temporary and the street will be paved next year. By then, a substantial dirt fill for the street just east of the tracks will have settled to make a good roadbed.

Because of the cost of paving, it is more of a problem than sidewalks but isolated, unpaved streets are a liability that deserve some thought. The rights of the individual citizen are not to be trampled on but neither should they be allowed to interfere with the well-being and happiness of others.

One Holdout Can Hurt

New U.N. Ambassador

President Johnson confounded the speculators with his appointment of Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg as ambassador to the United Nations to succeed Adlai E. Stevenson. Too, the President may have made in Goldberg one of the most outstanding appointments of his administration.

The obvious shortcoming with Goldberg is his lack of a diplomatic background. He has not dealt in any way in international affairs and will undoubtedly find this lack of experience troublesome. But he brings to the U.N. from and for the United States other qualities that will be invaluable.

That he has a keen mind is granted by all. That he has a dominating sense of justice and an abiding faith in democracy is doubted by none. Where could such qualities be of greater value than in the United Nations?

His faith in the rule of law and his powers of analysis and reasoning will give him the tools he needs to deal with the major powers of the world. His sense of justice, his belief in the equality of all mankind and his dedication to freedom are characteristics that should appeal to the smaller nations of the world.

With his background, Goldberg stands as the epitome of what the United Nations is supposed to be. In accepting the appointment by Johnson, Goldberg said that the task ahead is to apply the rule of law among sovereign nations. It is that or doom, he said, and we all know it.

It is the hope of the U.N. to replace the caprice and tyranny of men with dignity, understanding and respect. In his years as legal counsel for organized labor, as head of the Labor Department and as a Supreme Court justice, this has been the philosophy practiced by Goldberg. He fits his appointment admirably and should come to fulfill it with distinction.

The GOP Problem

Rep. John Lindsay, a nominal Republican who is considered the white hope to capture the New York mayorship from the Democrats, is not proving to be the beau ideal of his party.

Mr. Lindsay recently rebuffed former President Eisenhower's advice and let it be known that the farther the national Republicans remained from New York during his campaign the better he would like it.

In making his try he is up against basic 3 to 1 odds against being elected. The Democrats are very strong in New York City. He needs Democratic votes and, of himself, is a man who might get enough of them. His political actions have more closely paralleled Democratic thinking than the thinking of his party organization. It is only natural that he believes that a strong Republican image would be a detriment.

This Was To Be A Drought Year

No one can guess the weather. A few months ago there were fears of a drought in Nebraska. It had a great deal to do with planning the corn production. And the wheat crop looked bad.

Then as Nebraska was on the verge of being declared a drought area it began to rain. And it has rained ever since. Many areas have already surpassed their 10 year average and there is almost a half a year to go.

We never were farther wrong. But we are learning that just the right amount of rain at the right moment is the desired thing.

Now we are getting crop losses, not from drought but from over-moisture.

The weekly crop report says that the wheat harvest is only 70 percent finished. At this time last year it was 90 percent finished. Moreover, black rust is cutting production. And weeds have grown so rapidly that some fields have been wind-rowed.

Corn is in all stages of development, depending upon when it was planted. The replanted fields are not growing as they should. Yet fields nearby that survived the early moisture are in tassel. We may be cutting a higher than normal percent for fodder this year.

But it still looks like a good year for agriculture. The coming two weeks will make most of the corn and that will end the year's fear of drought.

Cattle prices have been restored and beef offers promise of profit. Hog prices are the best in years. We've got the stock and plenty of feed.

But as we say, no one is yet able to foretell the season and this year has been a prime example of that.

Both Russia, China Eye African Prize

WASHINGTON — The lady who was talking with Adlai Stevenson when he was stricken in the streets of London, Ambassador Marietta Tree, had recently returned from a remarkable UN mission to Africa.

It was a trip which she didn't want to take, partly because of the expense involved, partly because it was calculated to embarrass the United States at the hands of such potent communists as Chou En-lai of Red China and Deputy Foreign Minister Yakov Malik of Russia.

Mrs. Tree is American representative on "The Committee Of 24," a UN group charged with aiding the new, independent nations of Africa, and the trip to Africa was to check on the sale to South Africa of American arms which allegedly had been resold to White Rhodesians for use against the new Negro republic of Zambia, once Northern Rhodesia.

"Who is going to pay for the trip?" Mrs. Tree asked Ambassador Federenko, Russian envoy to the UN, when the junket was first proposed.

"The United Nations," he replied.

"That means the United States will be paying the major portion of the bill."

"But the United States is such a wealthy nation," smirked Federenko.

"I thought Russia boasted about its great economic growth and Gross National Product," Ambassador Tree shot back.

"Be careful or a big red bear will come out and get you," leered the Russian.

"Mr. Federenko," inquired the lady ambassador, "are you trying to scare me?" Federenko shut up.

Before leaving New York, Marietta Tree told her friend Averell Harriman in the State Department in Washington that perhaps a more experienced diplomat should go along; so the State Department finally sent retiring Ambassador Philip Bonsal along. He reported later that his presence was unnecessary; Mrs. Tree did a terrific job on her own.

The Russians considered the African trip so important that they delegated the former ambassador to London, now deputy foreign minister, Yakov Malik, as head of their mission; though when it became known that premier Chou En-lai was coming to East Africa simultaneously, Malik went back to Moscow. Apparently he didn't want to be dwarfed by the second highest man in Red China.

Most significant conclusion gained from the trip was that the rivalry between the two most powerful countries in the communist world is becoming more deadly than ever. Both China and Russia are bidding for the vast, unpopulated wealth of Africa.

When Tanzania, the new country which united Tanganyika and the island of Zanzibar, gave a state dinner for Chou En-lai in Dar Es Salaam, the Russian delegation was excluded.

That night, while Chou was being toasted by President Julius Nyerere, Russian Ambassadors Mendeleev and Shakov, the latter being the Soviet delegate to the Committee of 24, dined at the Indian embassy with Mrs. Tree. Russia, the United States and India were excluded from the Chinese-Tanzania festivities.

Watusi And Frug Accepted By Red Youth, Not The Party

NEW YORK — The kids in Soviet Russia are dancing the Watusi and the Frug — and the party is so angry it is doing the psychological twist.

Can't say that I blame them, either. I mean, what good is a totalitarian government if it can't control the chassiss of its youth? And it is absurd for a country that doesn't even allow freedom of speech to allow freedom of stereophonic cacophony. Besides, there are nasty political overtones:

Africa begat the Watusi (Africans have danced it for centuries), and the Watusi begat the Frug. Now, if Russia had gotten the Watusi direct from Africa, it possibly would have accepted it. If only for propaganda reasons. But the West got the Watusi first (bully wooley for our side), and the Reds see red every time they think of it. You can bet your boots the Soviets are clamping down on their youth this very moment; in communist China, it is rumored, they are "hinking again of binding the feet of their babies to assure that such western tribal rituals as the Monkey never get entrenched there."

It is difficult to say how Moscow can stomp out the stomping of the kids this time, but they always find a way.

I remember a few years back the grisly story of one Mlle. Irina Vilde. A writer, This lady had the foolhardy courage to write a story, which was published in the Ukrainian newspaper, Pravda, in which she claimed that "There are no greater enemies than husband and wife" in Russia.

She went on to write that, in her opinion, marital discord of the worst kind was caused by "job nervousness aroused by the incorrect attitudes of superiors to subordinates." She said that, beyond job tensions, marital unhappiness is caused by the continuing housing shortage, by jealousy, the division of working husbands and wives, and by vodka.

Well! The Soviets were red hot. In "Party Life" (a magazine which is not nearly as gay as it sounds), the organization struck back by saying Mlle. Vilde's complaints were completely without foundation and that she didn't know the facts of collective family life.

No one ever revealed what happened to Mlle. Vilde, but there is a rumor that she was given the severest possible punishment:

The party appointed her husband to edit her copy.

Even in America, men don't understand women.

It is not such a difficult problem, men, if you relax and open your mind. It also helps if you open your wallet, but this is not always necessary.

Women are so often misunderstood because they operate under the international femme code, which specifies that any female is entitled to set broad, sweeping rules of behavior for the world, but is privileged to exempt herself from following them.

Colombia On The Way Down

BOGOTA, Colombia—The Alliance for Progress has come to all but a full stop here in Colombia where, at the outset, the prospects seemed so bright. While it is hard to separate cause and effect, the government of the country is at the same time lapsing into a state of near paralysis. Unemployment is rapidly rising. The flight of capital continues, despite measures intended to stop it. Foreign exchange is all but exhausted and the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund and the U.S. Administration for International Development are saying a stern no to impassioned pleas for help.

Yet hope springs eternal that when things get bad enough, when the prospect is for bloodshed, breakdown, complete anarchy in the country, Washington will come to the rescue.

Last December when the situation was not quite so desperate, an aid loan ballooned out the government. Of that loan $10,000,000 is blocked despite the earnest petitions of President Guillermo "Leon" Valencia who has been unable or unwilling to enforce austerity and who has only just now, after several attempts, found someone willing to take the thankless job of minister of finance. The American intervention in the Dominican Republic underwrote the hopes of those who cling to the conviction that if the worse comes to the worst and if the worst can be shown to be communist-created, the Marines will be sent in.

A report from an American source, saying that plans were in readiness for the occupation of Colombia as the Dominican Republic had been occupied, made big headlines. Despite official denials, this put new life in the conviction that a reprieve could be counted on.

As one of the harassed Americans trying to bring some order out of the mess put it: "For us the Dominican crisis could not have come at a worse time."

Yet in the long view, the eruption in Santo Domingo is comparatively unimportant when put alongside the dilemma of Colombia and, for that matter, much of Latin America. It is simply that the frame of political and economic reference is far too narrow. What worked in a genteel way in the first part of this century is unworkable in the 1960s, with an exploding population and a revolution of rising expectations but rising demands.

Bogota was once known as the Athens of South America. A cultivated and, on the whole, enlightened elite governed responsibly with a caste system firmly fixed so there was rarely trouble from the lower orders. President Valencia, the son of one of Colombia's great poets, is a representative of that elite. But he finds himself helpless in the face of inexorable demands calling for skills, disciplines, techniques beyond the capacity of a 19th century government and a 19th century political system.

Following the outbreak of violence in 1948 in Bogota, which occurred in the middle of an Inter-American conference when Gen. George C. Marshall, as Secretary of State, headed the American delegation, came nearly a decade of bloodshed. In the countryside the liberals and conservatives carried on a Kentucky-type feud that cost up to 100,000 lives. This ended with agreement for a national front to last 16 years under which liberal and conservative presidents would alternate every four years. That, in effect, suspended the nation's political strife. But it did not bring vigorous or popular government. Valencia, a conservative, finds it difficult or impossible to get a two-thirds vote in the Congress required under the state of siege he declared some time ago.

Conspicuously on the left, splinter parties are breaking away from the national front. The population of Colombia has doubled in less than 20 years and today half of the population is under 20 years old. This poses an enormous task of education, training, the creation of new jobs. As a foreign observer put it to a leading Colombian politician: "It means that what you have to do in five to ten years

Even for a strong government with a viable economy, plus American help, that is a prospect so overwhelming as to create a sense of despair and defeat. If anyone knows the answer, this reporter in interviews with Colombians in and out of the government, has not heard it. President Valencia, who is said to weep when he talks of his frustrations, reportedly will impose some form of currency control to stop the drain of dollars flowing to America. But this requires administrative techniques that seem beyond the government. Bankers and industrialists fear that such an attempt widely evaded will make the situation worse.

Others talk of a military take-over in the near future, but the Colombian military is not of the "man on horseback" school, having, it is said, an inherent respect for civilian government. And as a leading banker put it: "They are not likely to take over a bankrupt government confronted by problems which they certainly do not know how to solve."

The sad commentary is that Colombia is potentially rich in resources. If it were not for a dispute with cabinet ministers in charge of petroleum and minerals, American oil companies would like to exploit a promising strike in Putumayo in the South, eventually carrying the oil by pipe line across the Andes to the coast. Iron ore and coal are in plentiful supply and large areas of fertile land could be framed with an expenditure of capital and strong governmental direction.

U.S. aid loans already made and technical assistance — the total for three years through 1964 was just under $340,000,000 — still go on. But it is a long way from that brave moment when President Kennedy, visiting here in December, 1961, cheered the Alianza Para El Progreso in a speech that drew a wildly fervent response.

PIERRE J. HUSS

South Africa Figures In World Strategy

The African nations in UN are divided on most problems confronting them as they are drawn perforce deeper and deeper from the comparative isolation of colonial rule into the tolls of high-powered, dog-eat-dog international diplomacy. But on one issue — in or out of UN — they are united in a solid front: A hard-bitten crusade to force the government of South Africa to abandon its racial policy of apartheid.

Periodically the hot heads and dictators among them call for naval blockades and total embargoes in economic and diplomatic relations with South Africa. At times over the past year or so, peanut dictators like Ben Bella of Algeria and Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana have threatened to send expeditionary forces against South Africa. But they have been overruled in both UN and the Organization of African unity, and not even leftist states like Mali and Guinea intend to put their trust and military resources at the disposal of notorious adventurers.

A basic reason for African failure to enlist non-communist nations in even a diplomatic pressure campaign to oust the nationalist regime in South Africa is rooted in the fact that no single African has yet come forward with the answer as to what is to replace the rule of law after those now in power have been replaced. Is there to be blood and violence as there has been in the Congo? Are the Africans willing to exchange the white supremacy rule for a radical and inexperienced "black supremacy" regime? Are they so blind in their hatred of the South African government as to be willing to risk chaos in the land and invite communist coups?

The issue of apartheid is to the Africans — and the Asians as well — the keystone of all things in the future. But to the Western powers, who have denounced apartheid without offering encouragement or help on economic embargoes and diplomatic freezes, the bitterness and tension accruing in and out of UN is something that cannot be dismissed lightly from the standpoint of world strategic calculations and on effects of maintaining peace.

There is also the acute problem of preventing the prospect of a racial confrontation between anti-Communist whites on the one hand and Africans accepting Communist help and especially arms on the other. That is what happened in both southeast Asian, Mideast and Latin American areas and caused escalating violence and bloodshed.

The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace took a long and thorough view at the whole apartheid problem in South Africa. In an inch-thick report on conclusions arrived at by four experts in international affairs seated at different American universities, the problem generated by African crusading against apartheid is pointed up in this way:

"South Africa has a more particular strategic significance to the West — particularly to the United States and Britain — quite apart from the role the dispute over apartheid may have with respect to the general western or Communist positions in Africa. In part this significance derives from the position South Africa occupies on the Cape route between Europe and the Far East — especially important in any crisis in which the use of the Suez canal might be denied or dangerous."

The Carnegie report, which offers no conclusions or solutions in South Africa, adds:

"In part the Republic's strategic importance stems from the position of Africa as the western boundary of the Indian Ocean. Should there develop in the Indian ocean area fairly large-scale and widespread operations, and should the West be denied access to such bases as Aden, Singapore or Hong Kong, South Africa on the West and Australia on the East might provide the only available alternate advance bases. Because of the greater U.S. capability in long-range air transport, the U.S. would be less handicapped in these circumstances than the British."

"The United States maintains installations of a different sort in South Africa. Located there are missile-tracking and deep space probe stations, used in part by the Atlantic missile tracking station, complementing these is a communications network which plays an important role in controlling commercial and military sea traffic in the Indian and South Atlantic Oceans."

House Passes Big Military Pay Boost

Washington (AP) — A 410-0 House vote Tuesday whipped a $1 billion a year military pay raise bill to the Senate for almost certain shrinkage.

The bill's price tag is twice as big as proposed by President Johnson, whose House lieutenants made no effort to trim it down more to the administration's liking.

It affects the base pay of 26 million uniformed military personnel, plus those who wear uniforms of the Coast Guard, the Public Health Service, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey. Subsistence, quarters and special allowances are not affected.

There was no immediate Senate reaction to the House decision, other than an assumption by Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., that when Congress finally sends the bill to the President the increase would be around six or seven per cent.

Chairman L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., of the House Armed Services Committee, who steered the bill through its smooth course in the House, wouldn't risk a guess on the final outcome.

"But I'll guarantee that it won't be as low as 7 per cent," Rivers told a newsman. "I won't compromise for that."

As head of the House conferees who eventually will iron out the bill's final form, Rivers will have a lot to say about it.

Retaining Salary

Speaking for his committee during House debate, Rivers called the administration's proposal for an average raise of 4.7% "disgracefully inadequate." Present military pay, Rivers said, is not adequate to retain in service men whose skills and training are

OLD PLANE MAY GO TO CITY PARK

The F86 fighter aircraft donated to the city by the U.S. Air Force will be put on display in Pioneer's Park . . . maybe

The plane is located at Lincoln Air Force Base, and Jim Ager, acting director of park and recreation, says that how to move it from the base to somewhere in the park picnic area has become a problem.

Short of flying it, he said the best bet is to hire a house moving firm and hoist it on a low-boy.

This would involve technical assistance from the Air Force which Ager said should soon be forthcoming because the Air Force is eager to get rid of the venerable fighter.

He said another alternative is giving the F86 to Rolland Harr, Airport Authority Executive Director, for display in the general aviation area at Lincoln Municipal Airport.

Requests For County Road Funds Higher

Lancaster County Engineer Hugh Dillon Tuesday requested $775,000 in highway funds and $429,000 in bridge funds for the 1965-66 fiscal year at a budget hearing before Lancaster County Commissioners.

Both requests are up from last year's budget of $683,000 for highways and $373,000 for bridges.

He pointed out that the dustless roads funds, created by the 1965 Legislature's LB-25, will add $30,000 to Lancaster County's budget. The money will be used on the Superior St. project, he said.

The special road levy requested is .838 as compared to .819 last year.

The mail route fund for 1964-65 was $460,000 as compared with an estimate of $489,000 for the 1965-66 fiscal year.

A public hearing on all departmental requests will be held July 28 and a budget will be adopted by the first Tuesday in August.

Caril Fugate Asks For Freedom On Bail Until Court Acts

Caril Ann Fugate Tuesday filed a motion in Lancaster District Court asking that she be admitted to bail in a reasonable amount pending determination of her action for relief under the post-conviction law.

Miss Fugate, who is serving a life sentence in the Women's Reformatory at York in connection with the Charles Starkweather killing spree in 1958, has asked the court to vacate her sentences on grounds that her constitutional rights were violated. LB836, passed by the 1965 Legislature, provides that person convicted of a felony who claims his constitutional rights were violated during prosecution may seek relief in the court which imposed the sentence.

Miss Fugate contends in her motion that habeas corpus actions were pending in the U.S. Circuit Courts but were dismissed and relief was immediately sought in Lancaster District Court upon the passage of LB836.

"The State has calculatedly pursued a course to avoid hearing on the merits for more than one year and continues this course of conduct and procedure when in fact the purpose of all law is for prompt hearing," the petition filed by attorney Merrill Reller states

Rail Unit Denies Phone Dispute Rehearing

The State Railway Commission Tuesday denied a request for a rehearing of a case involving a dispute between Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. of Omaha and Consolidated Telephone Co. of Dunning.

Northwestern Bell had requested that the commission reconsider its decision to turn the case over to the State Justice Department for appropriate court action.

The dispute between the two firms centers on toll line service to the Sandhills community of Seneca. Because of the dispute, the commission said, toll service was not supplied to Seneca for a 17-day period in August of last year.

The commission ordered the two companies to work out their disagreement, then turned the case over to the attorney general.

The commission Tuesday rejected the rehearing motion on a 3-2 vote.

In other action, the commission:

—Granted Northwestern Bell authority to establish extended area service between Omaha and the Bennington, Great Bend, Springfield and Valley exchanges.

—Set Aug. 16 for a public hearing on the request of Hamilton Telephone Co. of Aurora for a certificate to operate toll service in and near Aurora.

—Set Aug. 17 for a public hearing on the request of K & M Telephone Co., Inc., of Chambers, for a certificate to operate toll telephone service in Imanan.

—Denied the motion of the Burlington Railroad for reconsideration of the commission's order denying the railroad's request for authority to establish special rates on feed grains.

—Set Aug. 9 for a public hearing on the commission's order summoning officials of the Farmers Cooperative Elevator of Plymouth to show cause why their license should not be suspended or revoked for violation of laws governing grain elevators.

—Approved the purchase of all the outstanding stock of Ulta Transfer, Inc., of Ulita, by Bryan Hamick of Denver, Colo.

House Passes Big Military Pay Boost

Washington (AP) — A 410-0 House vote Tuesday whipped a $1 billion a year military pay raise bill to the Senate for almost certain shrinkage.

The bill's price tag is twice as big as proposed by President Johnson, whose House lieutenants made no effort to trim it down more to the administration's liking.

It affects the base pay of 2.6 million uniformed military personnel, plus those who wear uniforms of the Coast Guard, the Public Health Service, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey. Subsistence, quarters and special allowances are not affected.

There was no immediate Senate reaction to the House decision, other than an assumption by Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., that when Congress finally sends the bill to the President the increase would be around six or seven per cent.

Chairman L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., of the House Armed Services Committee, who steered the bill through its smooth course in the House, wouldn't risk a guess on the final outcome.

"But I'll guarantee that it won't be as low as 7 per cent," Rivers told a newsman. "I won't compromise for that."

As head of the House conferees who eventually will iron out the bill's final form, Rivers will have a lot to say about it.

Retaining Salary
Speaking for his committee during House debate, Rivers called the administration's proposal for an average raise of 4.7% "disgracefully inadequate." Present military pay, Rivers said, is not adequate to retain in service men whose skills and training are

OLD PLANE MAY GO TO CITY PARK

The F86 fighter aircraft donated to the city by the U.S. Air Force will be put on display in Pioneer's Park . . . maybe.

The plane is located at Lincoln Air Force Base, and Jim Ager, acting director of park and recreation, says that how to move it from the base to somewhere in the park picnic area has become a problem.

Short of flying it, he said the best bet is to hire a house moving firm and hoist it on a low-boy.

This would involve technical assistance from the Air Force which Ager said should soon be forthcoming because the Air Force is eager to get rid of the venerable fighter.

He said another alternative is giving the F86 to Rolland Harr, Airport Authority Executive Director, for display in the general aviation area at Lincoln Municipal Airport.

Requests For County Road Funds Higher

Lancaster County Engineer Hugh Dillon Tuesday requested $775,000 in highway funds and $429,000 in bridge funds for the 1965-66 fiscal year at a budget hearing before Lancaster County Commissioners.

Both requests are up from last year's budget of $683,000 for highways and $373,000 for bridges.

He pointed out that the dustless roads funds, created by the 1965 Legislature's LB-25, will add $30,000 to Lancaster County's budget. The money will be used on the Superior St. project, he said.

The special road levy requested is .838 as compared to .819 last year.

The mail route fund for 1964-65 was $460,000 as compared with an estimate of $469,000 for the 1965-66 fiscal year.

A public hearing on all departmental requests will be held July 28 and a budget will be adopted by the first Tuesday in August.

Caril Fugate Asks For Freedom On Bail Until Court Acts

Caril Ann Fugate Tuesday filed a motion in Lancaster District Court asking that she be admitted to bail in a reasonable amount pending determination of her action for relief under the post-conviction law.

Miss Fugate, who is serving a life sentence in the Women's Reformatory at York in connection with the Charles Starkweather killing spree in 1958, has asked the court to vacate her sentences on grounds that her constitutional rights were violated. LB836, passed by the 1965 Legislature, provides that person convicted of a felony who claims his constitutional rights were violated during prosecution may seek relief in the court which imposed the sentence. Miss Fugate contends in her motion that habeas corpus actions were pending in the U.S. Circuit Courts but were dismissed and relief was immediately sought in Lancaster District Court upon the passage of LB836.

"The State has calculatedly pursued a course to avoid hearing on the merits for more than one year and continues this course of conduct and procedure when in fact the purpose of all law is for prompt hearing," the petition filed by attorney Merrill Reller states.

Rail Unit Denies Phone Dispute Rehearing

The State Railway Commission Tuesday denied a request for a rehearing of a case involving a dispute between Northwestern Bell Telephone Co. of Omaha and Consolidated Telephone Co. of Dunning.

Northwestern Bell had requested that the commission reconsider its decision to turn the case over to the State Justice Department for appropriate court action.

The dispute between the two firms centers on toll line service to the Sandhills community of Seneca. Because of the dispute, the commission said, toll service was not supplied to Seneca for a 17-day period in August of last year.

The commission ordered the two companies to work out their disagreement, then turned the case over to the attorney general.

The commission Tuesday rejected the rehearing motion on a 3-2 vote. In other action, the commission:

—Granted Northwestern Bell authority to establish extended area service between Omaha and the Bennington, Gretna, Springfield and Valley exchanges.

—Set Aug. 16 for a public hearing on the request of Hamilton Telephone Co. of Aurora for a certificate to operate toll service in and near Aurora.

—Set Aug. 17 for a public hearing on the request of K & M Telephone Co., Inc., of Chambers, for a certificate to operate toll telephone service in Inman.

—Denied the motion of the Burlington Railroad for reconsideration of the commission's order denying the railroad's request for authority to establish special rates on feed grains.

—Set Aug. 9 for a public hearing on the commission's order summoning officials of the Farmers Cooperative Elevator of Plymouth to show cause why their license should not be suspended or revoked for violation of laws governing grain elevators.

—Approved the purchase of all the outstanding stock of Ulica Transfer, Inc., of Ulica, by Bryan Ramick of Denver, Colo.

Nance Officials Say Appraisal 25% Over Value

By VIRGIL FALLOON
Star Staff Writer

Nance County officials Tuesday told the State Board of Equalization that the county's scientific reappraisal is 25% higher than actual value.

"You can raise other counties to the statutory 35%," Nance County Atty. Phil Morgan testified, "but you must lower us."

Using a four-year study of sales-assessment figures, Morgan said the reappraisal figures are 43.9% of market value as rural land as compared with the statutory 35%.

Not Completed

He said a comparable study for urban and commercial property hasn't been completed yet.

John Brower, Fullerton city attorney, said sales-assessment ratio should be used by the board in equalizing assessments levels between counties.

"I think the sales price is valid," Brower said. "All factors of location, productivity, and use go into the buyer's judgment in the purchase prices."

"The counties which don't want sale price used are those which don't want assessed valuations raised," he said. "Our figures show our appraisal is above our sale prices."

John Rice, Nance County assessor, suggested the board "hold off one year until our reappraisal problems can be ironed out."

Fair

Mac Arnold, an official of the Justin Haines Appraisal Co., which made the Nance County reappraisal, said "the over-all value is fair and in line with 12 other counties being appraised by us."

Arnold said some internal adjustments are needed, but the over-all valuation is fair and justified.

Nance County, the first county to complete mandatory reappraisal, showed a valuation increase of nearly 50%.

Clifford Goodrich, Valley County assessor, said his county has a higher assessment rate than some of its neighbors.

Should Be Adjusted

He said all counties should be adjusted to the statutory 35% of actual value, but a blanket increase would "penalize those counties which have been paying what they should."

Last week, western county officials generally asked the board not to increase valuations.

Holmquist's Bill Would Let People Vote On Power Tax

Sen. C. W. Holmquist of Oakland Tuesday presented the Legislature's Public Works Committee with a bill proposing a vote of the people on the question of taxing public power districts.

The committee will consider the measure at an executive session scheduled for 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Five committee members will need to sign the bill if it is to be recommended to the Legislature for introduction.

Value $750 Million

Holmquist estimated that the property value of public power agencies, including municipal utilities now hovering at about $750 million.

Holmquist said he believes the districts should be taxed on their property value, but that municipal utilities should be exempted from the tax.

Municipal utilities, he said, now help alleviate the local tax burden by low rates and other benefits which help reduce property tax mill levies.

By terms of a constitutional amendment adopted by the people in 1958, in-lieu-of-tax payments made by public power districts are frozen at the amount paid in 1957.

However, power districts are also required to pay a percentage of their gross annual revenue derived from retail sales within municipalities. The total of the two payments shall equal five per cent of gross revenue.

The 1957 in-lieu payments are subtracted from the five per cent maximum gross revenue figure to determine just how much is paid from revenue.

The in-lieu payment is

Batchelder Plea Goes Unheeded

An impassioned plea by Omaha Sen. Clifton Batchelder for legislative recognition of the rights of property ownership failed Tuesday to dissuade the lawmakers from approving tentatively a bill to extend the eminent domain powers of the State Game Commission.

Advanced from general file on a 21-14 vote was LB554, which in amended form permits the Game Commission to use condemnation powers to acquire 18 assorted tracts of land totaling 4,139 acres.

Various circumstances, including owner reluctance and cloudy titles, have prevented the commission from purchasing the acreage.

Largest single tract involved is 2,000 acres for the Indian Cave State Park in southeast Nebraska.

Second largest condemnation authorized is 704 acres for the Ash Hollow State Historical Park.

Batchelder, in making the kill motion, said eminent domain ought to be allowed only where the procedure is necessary because of obscure ownership or title, but should not be used simply to force an unwilling property owner to sell.

While Batchelder sat back then, one speaker after another arose in defense of the measure.

When they had finished, Batchelder said he had just gone through the "most unpleasant and frightening experience" since he came to the Legislature.

He said proponents had evidenced "a complete lack of appreciation for the rights of

HIGHER STANDARDS OK'D FOR PRIVATE, PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS

By VIRGIL FALLOON
Star Staff Writer

The State Board of Education Tuesday adopted higher standards for state approval of Nebraska's 268 private and parochial schools.

The board also directed a study leading to development of accreditation rules for the public elementary schools.

Board discussion indicated lack of authority to impose penalties on public elementary schools violating regulations, but said the rules could set a guideline of standards and pressure from the parents would help bring the schools in line.

One board member suggested state apportionment funds to districts that failed to comply might be withheld with future enabling legislation.

No Major Objections

Representatives of Catholic and Lutheran schools made no major objections to the new rules and urged they be administered "in keeping with their purpose and spirit."

Loss of state approval means pupils would not be allowed to attend the school involved. Schools will have until the 1968-69 school year to meet the revised standards.

In other action, the board reaffirmed its stand on extending vocational-technical training opportunities to more Nebraska youth.

The board restated its earlier policy favoring state owned and operated schools along with locally operated vocational schools receiving state support.

Plans Reviewed

The board reviewed plans for a $165,620 expenditure of state funds for improvement at the Milford Trade School. Most would be used for main shop and classroom construction.

The board deferred action on a Hastings application for designation as an area vocational school, making federal funds available for building purposes.

The board declined to take a stand on a bill pending before the Legislature which would authorize sale of the 1.6 million acres of state school lands. Past boards have generally sided with groups opposing sale of the lands.

Dr. Floyd Miller, state commissioner of education, said, "I find myself wanting the lands to be retained, but at the same time I'm enough of a realist to realize it might be better for Nebraska's children if the lands were sold and the funds invested."

Last week, the Legislature gave first round floor approval to a bill placing the school lands on the auction block.

3 SCHOOLS GIVEN TOP RANKING

Three Nebraska schools were moved to the top rank of accreditation Tuesday by the State Board of Education. The board approved double A ratings for the Fremont, Kearney and Ralston school systems. Previously, they held a Class A accreditation rank.

The schools' switch in rating was recommended last month by the State Accreditation committee.

The board also ratified these recommendations:

—Aurora School at David City and the George Norris School System in Lancaster County were granted Class A ratings.
—Bushnell, Wolbach, Halsey-Dunning and Northwest School at Grand Island were granted minor accredited ranks.
—General warnings were issued to Class A schools at Bradshaw, Clarkson, Johnson, Louisville, Stuart, Theford, Weeping Water and Winde.
—General warnings went out to these minor accredited schools: Adams, Alton, Eagle, Arthur, Clearwater, Hildreth, Sunflower (Mitchell), Pleasanton, Plymouth, St. Edward and Yutan.

Revival Try Planned For ADC Boost

Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff Tuesday served notice on the Legislature that he will attempt to revive a bill increasing state payments for aid to dependent children.

Carpenter offered such a motion, then withdrew it pending congressional action on federal legislation which will affect the bill.

The measure, LB754, would increase maximum ADC payments to $110 a month for the first dependent child, and $25 monthly for each additional child.

Maximum payments are now $100 per month for the first child, $15 a month for each of the next three children in a family, and $10 monthly for each additional child.

Estimated price tag: an additional $2.5 million from the state general fund during the 1965-67 biennium.

The bill was killed on a 26-12 vote last month.

Budget Unit To Ask Restoration Of Patrol Funds

Two members of the Legislature's Budget Committee announced Tuesday that they intend to try to restore cuts made in preliminary action on the budgets of the State Safety Patrol and the Aeronautics Commission.

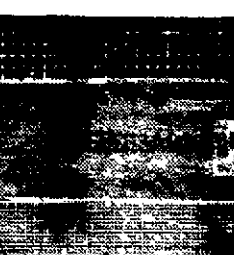

Sen. William Hasebroock of West Point reported he will seek a $249,060 general fund addition for the Patrol.

Hasebroock said restoration of the cut would allow the Patrol to add 30 troopers instead of only 15. The Patrol had asked for 80 new troopers.

Alliance Sen. George Gerdes said he will attempt to reverse the decision trimming $139,000 general fund subsidy for the Aeronautics Department for aid to municipal airports.

Gerdes said the spending cut will actually cause a loss of $556,000 worth of airport improvement projects.

He said proponents had evidenced "a complete lack of appreciation for the rights of the property owner, and the trend toward the socialistic idea of everything for the masses and nothing for the individual."

Batchelder said the right to own property and the urge to acquire property are basic to this country's free enterprise system and its greatness.

Backers of LB554, sponsored by Sens. Cecil Craft of North Platte and Calista Cooper Hughes of Humboldt, said scenic, historical and recreational areas need to be preserved for the public, and the condemnations envisioned are needed to carry out the state's 10-year park development program.

Tracts which the bill approves for condemnation, with acreage, include:

- Indian Cave State Park, 2,000 acres.
- Ash Hollow state historical park, 704 acres.
- Ponca State Park, 560 acres.
- Scouts Rest Ranch state historical park, 40 acres.
- Kearney State Recreation Area, two tracts totaling 220 acres.
- Wood River state wildlife area, 2.35 acres for access.
- Platte Valley Parkway Road Ranch at Elm Creek interchange on interstate highway, 250 acres.
- Chadron State Park, 6 acres for entrance control.
- State Wildlife Area at Shelton interchange, 3.22 acres.
- State Wildlife Area at Alda interchange, 5 acres.

- Two Rivers state recreation area, 30 acres.
- Chalkline state wildlife area, 40 acres.
- Proposed wildlife area at Odessa interchange, 14 acres.
- Newark strip state special use area, 1 acre.
- Wildlife management area between Platte river and interstate, 120 acres.
- State wildlife area south of Maxwell, 15 acres.

What They're Reading

For the literary and movie-going enthusiast, Harper and Row Publishing Co. has some news that should interest you. The very popular and somewhat controversial actress, Elizabeth Taylor, will see her works in print this coming November. Miss Taylor's autobiography will discuss her movie career, her husbands and her children.

Another woman writer recently has been recognized for her current writing achievement. Elizabeth Spencer, who wrote the best-seller—"A Light in the Piazza," now has a book out entitled "Knights and Dragons." The novel is noted as her finest achievement to date. The New York Times had this to say about the book—"she recreates a luminous Italian atmosphere from which brilliantly drawn characters emerge with breathtaking clarity."

There are some new developments on the best-seller list to make note of this week.

We will begin with "Herzog" which has been absent from the fiction list for the last two weeks, but has again made a come-back. This week it holds on by the skin of its teeth as it placed in the number ten position.

For some real new developments we should take a look at the non-fiction listing where you will discover two newcomers for the week. They are the "Intern" by Doctor X and "Games People Play" by Berne. Credit may well be given to "the Making of the President: 1964" by White, since it has flown up to the number three spot after only three weeks of life on the honor roll. Equally important is the number two ranker on the non-fiction list—"Is Paris Burning" by Collins and Lapierre, which has been a best-seller for only five weeks.

We Hear That

Mr. and Mrs. Gary L. Greuenemir of York have announced the arrival of a son, Gary Lee, Jr., on Thursday, July 15. The baby's paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Alex Greuenemir of Lincoln, and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Maxey of Salida, Colo., are the maternal grandparents.

VISITORS from Seattle

In town, are Mrs. J. B. Siegwarth and her son, Bobby, of Seattle, Wash., who are guests at the home of Mrs. Siegwarth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Armstrong. It has been more or less of a family summer for the Armstrongs and the Siegwarths—Miss Suzanne Armstrong went to Seattle a few weeks ago for a visit with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Siegwarth. Then Miss Armstrong, Mrs. Siegwarth and Bobby joined Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong at Estes Park, Colo., and after several days there the fivesome returned to Lincoln.

ON THEIR way to Danworthy

Everything cooperated but the weather. The train was approximately on time, reservations were all in order and the girls, looking very fresh and charming, were ready to take off for Danworthy Camp at Walker, Minn on Monday evening. Then it rained.

Limp went the blonde and brunette locks that had spent the day in rollers, clips and whatever was necessary; and limp went the crisp sports outfits that had been pressed and repressed countless times during the day.

As we said before—it rained. But the Danworthy Camp contingent left on schedule looking, as one mother stated, as though they had just come out of the swimming pool.

Anyway, they were cute—and we'll introduce at least five of the 18 who were Minnesota bound.

At the top of the steps are Freve Pace (left) and Elizabeth Weyhrauch. The others, from up-to-down, are Carol Deeter, Sydney Whitehead and Frances Nefsky.

Already aboard the train were Diane Fenton, Jane Holland, Nancy and Hane Hansen, Janice Krejci, Susan Simon, Mary Harley, Kay Shiner, Nan Dunker, Susan Pegler, Sally Wiese and Christie Hoyt.

Joining the group at Danworthy was Susan Shackelford who drove to Minnesota with her family.

WHY Grow Old?

keep your beauty and energy

Josephine Lowman

Here are a few tricks which will keep you pretty and banish a lot of small leaks in your energy, too.

Since a large portion of our 24-hour day is spent in sleeping, the quality of your mattress is very important.

A sagging, lumpy, or mushy, soft mattress, offers little support to the spine and can cause muscle ache. Orthopedists recommend firm mattresses for proper support and better rest. If your mattress gives too much, a bed board placed underneath is a wise and inexpensive investment.

If you read in bed, prop yourself up comfortably erect with firm pillows or a back-rest and hold your book up, perhaps with the help of a small bookstand, so that your back and neck are not strained into a curve. Your light should be high enough so that you needn't drop or slump to see.

Twisted Positions

Low, deep-seated sofas encourage curved spines and twisted positions. Firm throw pillows to lean against are decorative and will shorten the depth of the seat so that posture is more erect. The habit of constantly crossing the legs is usual, yet medical men warn that this can create circulation problems. By adding a foot-stool or an ottoman to your favorite TV watching chair you can break this habit.

When dining, pull your chair under the table as far as feasible. You will sit straighter and may even digest your food better. In the kitchen sit at your work counter rather than bend over it. Sit while ironing, too. A stool of adjustable height

Too Low

Bathroom bowls and kitchen sinks seem to be planned for midgets or children, although many new houses now have them fixed at a higher and more comfortable level for adults. Practice standing erect when brushing your teeth or creaming your face.

The tendency is to lean forward. Be sure that the mirror is high enough so that your husband needn't stoop when he shaves.

The small light on the sewing machine is an aid to your eyes, but if you use that alone, you will bend in to your work and curve your spine. The same goes for adequate light on piano music or a desk.

NEWS of suburban areas

We have a host of the usual activities going on in Suburbia—the trips, guests and new residents, for instance.

But there is something special to report from the Cotner Terrace area this morning and that concerns the newly organized extension club. So we suspect there will be some lucky husbands around that area who will soon be tasting new dishes, enjoying homemade clothes, viewing the new touches that their ingenious wives have added inside—and probably outside—the home as well. You may be sure that the members will be displaying well organized homes before they complete their home-making courses in the club.

COTNER TERRACE

With a name selected and officers chosen, the 14 members of "The Domestic Dames" Extension Club are well on their way to achieving a boastful and worthy club in their neighborhood. The remaining loose ends were tied together at the club's last meeting which was held at the home of Mrs. Barry Burkhardt. It was there that words were tossed around until that one perfect name was chosen, and it was there that Mrs. Robert Converse was elected the club's new president. Other officers include Mrs. Lawrence Looby, vice-president; and Mrs. Barry Burkhardt, secretary-treasurer. But there are 11 more members who pioneered the club to full existence and are equally worth mentioning—they are Mrs. Eugene Kennedy, Mrs. Ronald Busboom, Mrs. Dave Richardson, Mrs. Dean Wiegert, Mrs. Robert Mefford, Mrs. Lloyd Stahl, Mrs. Larry Houghton, Mrs. Earl Flitener, Mrs. Ronald Shaloupka and Mrs. Dorothy Bell.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Lehr and Mrs. Ira Lehr packed some Nebraska spirit into their suitcases before leaving on their vacation. The threesome spent about two days in the Panhandle area and particularly at Lake McConaughy. After the stay in the western part of the state the travelers continued on to the Black Hills, the Needles and the Bad Lands. The week of vacationing included a view of the famous Four Faces at Mount Rushmore and a trip to Spearfish, S.D. where the three attended the Passion Play. The vacationers returned home on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Williams and daughter Cindy returned home last Friday after spending two and one-half weeks visiting relatives and sight-seeing along the east coast.

To mention a few of the threesomes sight-seeing ventures, we will need to mention Radio Music Hall and the World's Fair and to the World's Fair we should add that the three were present on the grounds on "Nebraska Day". Other interesting stops the trio made included Cape Cod, Hyannis Port, and Boston where Mr. and Mrs. Williams were the house guests of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. David Williams and their daughter Annette. In New York City, the three visited for a few days with Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Hoffman. But there was another stop-off to be made before the three returned home and that was in Rochester, N.Y. where they were the guests of Mrs. Williams' brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Homer Imes. Mr. and Mrs. Imes and Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman are former Lincoln residents and all are graduates of Nebraska Wesleyan University.

What They're Reading

For the literary and movie-going enthusiast, Harper and Row Publishing Co. has some news that should interest you. The very popular and somewhat controversial actress, Elizabeth Taylor, will see her works in print this coming November. Miss Taylor's autobiography will discuss her movie career, her husbands and her children.

Another woman writer recently has been recognized for her current writing achievement. Elizabeth Spencer, who wrote the best-seller—"A Light in the Piazza," now has a book out entitled "Knights and Dragons." The novel is noted as her finest achievement to date. The New York Times had this to say about the book—"she recreates a luminous Italian atmosphere from which brilliantly drawn characters emerge with breathtaking clarity."

There are some new developments on the best-seller list to make note of this week.

We will begin with "Herzog" which has been absent from the fiction list for the last two weeks, but has again made a come-back. This week it holds on by the skin of its teeth as it placed in the number ten position.

For some real new developments we should take a look at the non-fiction listing where you will discover two newcomers for the week. They are the "Intern" by Doctor X and "Games People Play" by Berne. Credit may well be given to "the Making of the President: 1964" by White, since it has flown up to the number three spot after only three weeks of life on the honor roll. Equally important is the number two ranker on the non-fiction list—"Is Paris Burning" by Collins and Lapierre, which has been a best-seller for only five weeks.

Fiction

1. "The Source," Michener
2. "Up the Down Staircase," Kaufman
3. "Hotel," Halley
4. "The Ambassador," West
5. "The Green Berets," Moore
6. "Don't Stop the Carnival," Wouk
7. "Night of Camp David," Knebel
8. "The Looking-Glass War," LeCarre
9. "Flight of the Falcon," du Maurier
10. "Herzog," Bellow

Non-Fiction

1. "Markings," Hammarskjold
2. "Is Paris Burning," Collins and Lapierre
3. "The Making of the President: 1964," White
4. "The Oxford History of the American People," Morison
5. "Journal of a Soul," Pope John XXIII
6. "Queen Victoria: Born to Succeed," Longford
7. "Intern," Doctor X
8. "Games People Play," Berne
9. "Sixpence in Her Shoe," McGinley
10. "My Shadow Ran Fast," Sands

We Hear That

Mr. and Mrs. Gary L. Greuenemier of York have announced the arrival of a son, Gary Lee, Jr., on Thursday, July 15. The baby's paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Alex Greuenemier of Lincoln, and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Maxey of Salida, Colo., are the maternal grandparents.

VISITORS from Seattle

In town, are Mrs. J. B. Siegwarth and her son, Bobby, of Seattle, Wash., who are guests at the home of Mrs. Siegwarth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Armstrong.

It has been more or less of a family summer for the Armstrongs and the Siegwarths—

Miss Suzanne Armstrong went to Seattle a few weeks ago for a visit with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Siegwarth. Then Miss Armstrong, Mrs. Siegwarth and Bobby joined Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong at Estes Park, Colo., and after several days there the fivesome returned to Lincoln.

ON THEIR way to Danworthy

Everything cooperated but the weather. The train was approximately on time, reservations were all in order and the girls, looking very fresh and charming, were ready to take off for Danworthy Camp at Walker, Minn on Monday evening. Then it rained.

Limp went the blonde and brunette locks that had spent the day in rollers, clips and whatever was necessary; and limp went the crisp sports outfits that had been pressed and repressed countless times during the day.

As we said before—it rained. But the Danworthy Camp contingent left on schedule looking, as one mother stated, as though they had just come out of the swimming pool.

Anyway, they were cute—and we'll introduce at least five of the 18 who were Minnesota bound.

At the top of the steps are Freve Pace (left) and Elizabeth Weyhrauch. The others, from up-to-down, are Carol Deeter, Sydney Whitehead and Frances Nefsky.

Joining the group at Danworthy was Susan Shackelford who drove to Minnesota with her family.

WHY Grow Old?

keep your beauty and energy

Josephine Lowman

Here are a few tricks which will keep you pretty and banish a lot of small leaks in your energy, too.

Since a large portion of our 24-hour day is spent in sleeping, the quality of your mattress is very important. A sagging, lumpy, or mushy, soft mattress, offers little support to the spine and can cause muscle ache. Orthopedists recommend firm mattresses for proper support and better rest. If your mattress gives too much, a bed board placed underneath is a wise and inexpensive investment.

If you read in bed, prop yourself up comfortably erect with firm pillows or a backrest and hold your book up, perhaps with the help of a small bookstand, so that your back and neck are not strained into a curve. Your light should be high enough so that you needn't drop or slump to see.

Twisted Positions

Low, deep-seated sofas encourage curved spines and twisted positions. Firm throw pillows to lean against are decorative and will shorten the depth of the seat so that posture is more erect. The habit of constantly crossing the legs is usual, yet medical men warn that this can create circulation problems. By adding a footstool or an ottoman to your favorite TV watching chair you can break this habit.

When dining, pull your chair under the table as far as feasible. You will sit straighter and may even digest your food better. In the kitchen sit at your work counter rather than bend over it. Sit while ironing, too. A stool of adjustable height which has a back is perfect for these purposes. Don't stoop when washing dishes. The chore may not go as fast if you take the trouble to stand straight but you will feel less tired when you have finished.

Too Low

Bathroom bowls and kitchen sinks seem to be planned for midgets or children, although many new houses now have them fixed at a higher and more comfortable level for adults. Practice standing erect when brushing your teeth or creaming your face.

The tendency is to lean forward. Be sure that the mirror is high enough so that your husband needn't stoop when he shaves.

The small light on the sewing machine is an aid to your eyes, but if you use that alone, you will bend in to your work and curve your spine. The same goes for adequate light on piano music or a desk.

COURTESY for a bride-elect

There was a party the other evening for Miss Linda Kaul whose fiance is Lt. Harold Ray Bauer. The party hostesses were Mrs. R. J. Adamschek, Mrs. Sam Drieth and Mrs. John Sell who entertained at the home of Mrs. Adamschek.

And just in case there is a bit of curiosity about the parachute, we'll explain that Lt. Bauer is a Paratroop Medical Officer — at the moment, that is.

Right now the potential bridegroom is in the Dominican Republic, and this is his second tour of duty there. But everything is a little confused, even a definitely definite wedding date. Lt. Bauer was sent back to the United States and was assured that he would have leave. But before the leave could begin he was sent back to the Dominican Republic to assist in establishing a medical program of some sort. He again is expecting his leave to come at any moment. And maybe it will — But then again, there always is Viet Nam.

But the party apparently was fun, and in the picture left to right are Mrs. Adamschek, Miss Kaul, Mrs. H. R. Bauer, mother of the bridegroom; and Mrs. Paul Kaul of Omaha, mother of the bride-elect.

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

To Be Honored

In pre-nuptial courtesy to Miss JoAnn Crear, whose marriage to Donald B. Copas will take place on Aug. 21, at St. Mark's Methodist Church, Miss Helga Lutomski will have 20 guests at an 8 o'clock breakfast at Gold's Cafeteria on Saturday, July 31.

The guest list will include a group of business associates of the bride-elect who will be presented with a miscellaneous shower.

DEAR ABBY: Shortly before school let out for the summer vacation we took our daughter (she is 16) out of school so she could attend a wedding out of town with us. Arrangements were made for her to take her examinations, get her grades etc. We made a vacation trip of it and returned three weeks later. The first inkling I had that something was wrong was when several of my friends telephoned to ask, "Did your daughter come back with you?" I couldn't understand why they would think she wouldn't.

Finally a dear friend told me that it was all over town that we had taken our daughter out of school to place her in a home for unwed mothers! When she returned, the rumor had changed to, "She must have either lost the baby or had an abortion!" Our daughter has a nice circle of friends and none of them has ever been in any trouble. How can respectable, innocent people combat a rumor of this kind?

DEAR MOTHER: Unless you can track down the instigator and charge him with slander (which is about as easy as putting toothpaste back in the tube) you can do nothing but hold your head high and ignore the talk.

DEAR ABBY: I know this letter will not get in the column but I want my say about "Second Place." The husband who resented his wife's closeness to her parents. You said the wife needed a psychiatrist. Abby, I think YOU need one. I am married and I see my parents every day. I wouldn't think of buying anything or making an important decision without their okay. And my husband doesn't resent this closeness. I love my parents deeply and they won't be here forever so I am making the most of everything now.

SANDY IN PENN. DEAR SANDY: I am all for maintaining a close relationship with parents after marriage. But "Second Place" complained because he was in second place after his wife's parents. Wise parents teach their children that their mates must always come first. True, parents are not here forever—but neither are mates.

DEAR ABBY: I will be a September bride and all our plans are made for the wedding. My future mother-in-law has warned me that if I serve alcoholic beverages at the wedding dinner, she will not attend. Our wedding will be held in a church, and the wedding dinner will be held at a fashionable hotel. I planned to serve wine at the dinner. We do not have any rowdy friends. My parents feel that since they are paying for everything, my fiancé's mother should not interfere. My fiancé feels badly about this, but says she is his mother and that's the way she is. But he wouldn't blame me for having wine. My parents say that I should not change my plans to suit his narrow-minded mother. I want to do the right thing. Can you advise me?

MIXED UP ALREADY DEAR MIXED UP: The wedding and all festivities are the bride's responsibility and I think your fiancé's mother is being unreasonable and difficult. What she wishes to drink or abstain from drinking is her business, but she shouldn't be allowed to make that decision for all the other guests. Remind her that wine was served at The Last Supper.

The bidding:

Opening lead—four of spades.

We don't usually tell tales out of school, but this story is worthy of repetition.

The hand occurred some years ago in the expert rubber bridge game at the Cavendish Club in New York. If the bidding appears screwy, all we can say is that it was. Nevertheless, for what it's worth, there is a reasonable explanation for the extraordinary bidding sequence that occurred.

Some experts, then as well as now, use the Gerber convention opposite notrump bids. The Gerber convention is similar to Blackwood, the chief difference being that the quest for aces starts at four clubs instead of four notrump.

The responses to the Gerber four club bid are similar to the responses to the Blackwood four notrump. A four diamond response shows no aces; four hearts, one ace; four spades, two aces, and so on.

South felt certain that if North's two notrump bid included three aces there would be thirteen easy tricks. Therefore, in an effort to get to the grand slam, he responded four clubs, hoping that his illustrious partner would read this response as a Gerber bid.

South's hopes fully materialized. North did recognize the four club bid as Gerber. He responded four spades to show his three aces. It didn't occur to North that actually, according to the convention, he was showing only two aces.

You may wonder, therefore, why South now bid seven hearts, knowing that his side was missing an ace. The answer is that South made the same miscalculation as North had made. He read the four spade response as showing three aces.

There was certainly nothing wrong with the final contract—there were tricks to burn. North was Harold Ogust, New York star who has represented the United States internationally, and South was Alphonse Moysse, Jr., the editor of the Bridge World magazine. They proved one thing.

Two wrongs make a right.

DEAR ABBY: I know this letter will not get in the column but I want my say about "Second Place," the husband who resented his wife's closeness to her parents. You said the wife needed a psychiatrist. Abby, I think YOU need one. I am married and I see my parents every day. I wouldn't think of buying anything or making an important decision without their okay. And my husband doesn't resent this closeness. I love my parents deeply and they won't be here forever so I am making the most of everything now.

SANDY IN PENN. DEAR SANDY: I am all for maintaining a close relationship with parents after marriage. But "Second Place" complained because he was in second place after his wife's parents. Wise parents teach their children that their mates must always come first. True, parents are not here forever—but neither are mates.

DEAR ABBY: I will be a September bride and all our plans are made for the wedding. My future mother-in-law has warned me that if I serve alcoholic beverages at the wedding dinner, she will not attend. Our wedding will be held in a church, and the wedding dinner will be held at a fashionable hotel. I planned to serve wine at the dinner. We do not have any rowdy friends. My parents feel that since they are paying for everything, my fiance's mother should not interfere. My fiance feels badly about this, but says she is his mother and that's the way she is. But he wouldn't blame me for having wine. My parents say that I should not change my plans to suit his narrow-minded mother. I want to do the right thing. Can you advise me?

MIXED UP ALREADY DEAR MIXED UP: The wedding and all festivities are the bride's responsibility and I think your fiance's mother is being unreasonable and difficult. What she wishes to drink or abstain from drinking is her business, but she shouldn't be allowed to make that decision for all the other guests. Remind her that wine was served at The Last Supper.

Mrs. Vernon Yanney of North Platte who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Edna Jacob, was a guest at the Monday evening meeting of the Lincoln Toastmistress Club at Capitol Hotel. Miss Jacob served as timekeeper during the program.

Mrs. Virgil Maas introduced the impromptu topic of discussion, and Mrs. J. F. Calcaterra and Mrs. S. Charity Greene responded. Mrs. Robert D. Meyerhoff, as Toastmistress, introduced a trio of speakers. Mrs. Frank B. O'Connell spoke on "Highlights of a Hike," Mrs. Bryan Stromer discussed "An Anniversary," and Mrs. Jean Coll described "Some Characters I Have Met," as she related experiences of an extensive holiday trip.

Mrs. Josephine Eyer was the chief evaluator of the program, assisted by Mrs. Charles E. Chace and Mrs. Robert W. Herman, Mrs. Greene.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
2NT	Pass	4♣	Pass
4♣	Pass	7♥

Opening lead—four of spades.

We don't usually tell tales out of school, but this story is worthy of repetition.

The hand occurred some years ago in the expert rubber bridge game at the Cavendish Club in New York. If the bidding appears screwy, all we can say is that it was. Nevertheless, for what it's worth, there is a reasonable explanation for the extraordinary bidding sequence that occurred.

Some experts, then as well as now, use the Gerber convention opposite notrump bids. The Gerber convention is similar to Blackwood, the chief difference being that the quest for aces starts at four clubs instead of four notrump.

The responses to the Gerber four club bid are similar to the responses to the Blackwood four notrump. A four diamond response shows no aces; four hearts, one ace; four spades, two aces, and so on.

South felt certain that if North's two notrump bid included three aces there would be thirteen easy tricks. Therefore, in an effort to get to the grand slam, he responded four clubs, hoping that his illustrious partner would read this response as a Gerber bid.

South's hopes fully materialized. North did recognize the four club bid as Gerber. He responded four spades to show his three aces. It didn't occur to North that actually, according to the convention, he was showing only two aces.

You may wonder, therefore, why South now bid seven hearts, knowing that his side was missing an ace. The answer is that South made the same miscalculation as North had made. He read the four spade response as showing three aces.

There was certainly nothing wrong with the final contract—there were tricks to burn. North was Harold Ogust, New York star who has represented the United States internationally, and South was Alphonse Moyse, Jr., the editor of the Bridge World magazine. They proved one thing.

Two wrongs make a right.

SPORT SIGNALS

By Hal Brown
Sports Editor, The Star

Not Enough Baseball

A "sports fan from Adams" writes to complain of coverage given to major league baseball.

"I am writing to tell you how disappointed I have been in the Lincoln Star's sports page the last couple of weeks," he says. "Today (July 16) for an example, I was anxious to see the paper and see how Thursday's baseball games came out."

"The whole front page was about ladies golf, horse racing and other junk. I realize some people are interested in these sports and you should cover them, but need they push the National Pastime completely out of your paper?"

"Your whole Friday's paper was not worth looking at to everybody except a select few people in Lincoln who were directly connected with the ladies in the tournament. Please, Hal, from now on let's cover the major sports of baseball, football and basketball at least on an even keel with your Lincoln sports."

COMMENT—Contrary to the Adams reader's belief, the sports he mentions were not Lincoln sports. Horse racing certainly has a statewide flavor and the ladies golf was a state tournament. The issue of the paper to which he refers also carried stories on the U.S. track team competing in Norway, the Jim Brown trial, a hunting and fishing bill plus results of major league baseball games that were completed when his edition went to press that night.

Not Enough Horse Racing

Another reader, Bob Seitzer of Omaha, asks for more horse racing coverage.

"Your sports section would provide a real service to the many horse racing fans of Eastern Nebraska if you would print charts of the races rather than just the bare results and mutuels," he writes.

"These charts are useful to horse players, amateur and pro alike. True, they can be found in the Daily Racing Form, but this is usually two-to-three days after the race has been run and the form is not as readily available as your paper. In addition, it is much more expensive."

COMMENT—Wouldn't it be wonderful if no one were interested in anything but ping pong.

Wisconsin Stronger Defensively

Wisconsin, Nebraska's Oct. 9 opponent at Memorial Stadium, returns 16 letterman and loses 21 from last year's team that finished with a 3-6 record and a tie for seventh in the Big 10.

The Big 10's football prospectus compiled by the league office says this about the Badgers:

TEAM STRENGTHS . . . excellent nucleus of defensive performers, many of whom played a vital role in the 1964 season's finale, a 14-7 victory over Minnesota . . . top line-backing in Tom Brigham and Bob Richter . . . captain Dave Froner is one of league's better defensive backs.

NEEDS . . . rebuilding offensive line and finding a starting backfield . . . only two offensive starters from 1964 return—tackles Mike Sachen and Chuck Currier (who was a guard last year) . . . finding offensive punch to improve 1965's 2.85 yard per play average . . . sophomore quarterback Chuck Burt, who was out of the 1964 season because of illness, showed up well in the spring.

TOP INDIVIDUALS . . . Quarterback Chuck Burt, who showed great promise before his 1964 illness . . . halfback Tom Jankowski, fullback Kim Wood . . . linebackers Tom Brigham and Bob Richter . . . and defensive leader, halfback Dave Froner.

COACH'S QUOTE . . . "Much depends on how successful we are in rebuilding our offensive capabilities. We feel we'll be stronger defensively where we have great promise."

HOT JOCKEY CONTEST—

Champ Dixie Wins Governor's Purse

By BARRY BURKHART
Star Sports Writer

Governor Frank Morrison was on hand Tuesday to honor Champ Dixie, the winner of the featured Governor's Day Purse race, at the rain-soaked Nebraska State Fairgrounds track.

Morrison witnessed a thrilling photo finish in which Champ Dixie edged out place horse Shall Again by a neck for the victory.

The winner was never far off the pace and moved strongly in the stretch to hold off Shall Again. The latter saved ground until she slipped through to the rail on the turn and finish strongly.

Champ Dixie paid $11.60, $4.80 and $3.20; Shall Again returned $4.00 and $2.60; and the 2-1 favorite, Hot Cargo, paid $2.80 to show.

The contest for the track's leading jockey grew hotter as the first three ranking riders went all out for the lead.

Fred Hare, in third place when Tuesday's races began, jockeyed Admiral Roy and Fearborn, winners respectively of both ends of the daily double; rode Our Chris to victory in the fifth; and pushed Rare Deal to an easy win in the sixth. Besides his wins, Hare rode show horse Miss Dart in the third race.

Hare's showing brought him to within two points of second-place jockey Boyd Morris, who kept his position on the strength of his victory ride on Sam Hill in the eighth race. Morris also jockeyed place horse Shall Again in the seventh (feature) race, and rode Portola Way and Pick's Son to show in the second and sixth races, respectively.

Leading jockey Fred Ecoffey maintained his lead, but the margin was cut considerably. Ecoffey piloted Shall Again in the Governor's Purse and rode place horses Prince Fala and Stormed In in the fourth and eighth races, respectively.

The wins of the Hare piloted Admiral Roy (No. 3) and Fearborn (No. 7) combined to pay a daily double of $39.

Track attendance of 4,515 was the highest weekday total of the current meet and was up 534 over last year's total on the same date. The mutuel handle of $189,961 was by no means the highest of the meet, but was $22,417 over last year's total.

Tim Qualifies For USGA Meet

Omaha — Tyler Borman of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Tim Bateman of Lincoln, won qualifying spots Tuesday for U.S. Golf Association Junior Amateur Golf Championships at Wilmington, Del., Aug. 3-7.

Borman led the field of 24 youngsters with a 73. Bateman had a 74. The first alternate is Marc Gorges, Lincoln, with a 76. Trying for second alternate at 79 were Gerry Quinlan, Omaha, and Dave Gildea, Columbus, both 79.

Play was over the Highland Country Club Course.

PRISCILLA'S ON A SPREE

Like they say it isn't the heat that gets you . . . it's the humidity.

The only place for racing fans at the Fairgrounds Tuesday was in front of one of the fans.

It was not only cooler it kept you from having a look at that horrible track.

I don't understand why a little bit of rain should always turn the inside of the stretch into a swamp.

Wednesday I plan to take $2 win tickets on Hornum Bunnie in the third race and Wee Bomb in the seventh race.

(Tuesday) Aunt Priscilla lost on both of her $2 bets leaving her $69.40 of her $92 spree fund.)

Former Pro Is Two-Under-Par

... IN STATE QUALIFYING

By HAL BROWN
Star Sports Editor

Jack Kendzior, a 29-year-old former pro golfer from Omaha, recorded the only sub-par round in leading qualifiers for the Nebraska State Men's Amateur Golf Tournament Tuesday at the Lincoln Country Club.

Kendzior shot a two-under-par 70 over the 6,700-yard LCC course despite three-putting the final green for a bogey-5.

"I guess you might say I backed into the 70," Kendzior remarked after signing his scorecard. "That was the only three-putt green I had."

However, Tuesday's qualifying scores do not count when the 77 qualifiers who shot 83 or less begin battling for the title won the past three years by Omaha's Bob Astleford.

Jack Pratt of Fremont, who qualified in local play for the U.S. Open this year at the heavily-wooded Lincoln layout, was second among qualifiers with a 72.

Five golfers, including former champions Astleford and Dick Spangler Jr. of Lincoln tied at two-over-par 74. Others in the group were Charlie Borner, Glen Gruenemeier and Chuck Sweetman, all of Lincoln.

Matt Taber, reigning Lincoln City Champion, was among the five golfers tied at 75.

The 77 qualifiers will play 18 holes both today and Thursday with four flights being set up after the 36 holes for Friday's final round. The top 24 will play 36 holes in the championship flight Friday with the other three flights playing 18 holes.

Kendzior served as a teaching pro for one year at the Kissing Camels golf course in Colorado Springs in 1961 before deciding to return to the amateur ranks.

"I just didn't care for the long hours nor for the pay," he recalls. "I wanted to spend more time with my family so I quit the job."

Kendzior applied for reinstatement of his amateur standing and received it in time to play in last summer's state tournament at Beatrice where he finished third.

With the exception of the 18th hole where he three-putted, Kendzior found his only other trouble during the round on the second and ninth holes where he was stymied by trees and had to give up a shot to chip back in the fairway.

He offset the bogies on Nos. 2 and 9 with birdie putts of 22 feet at No. 4 and 20 feet at No. 7 for a par-36 at the turn.

He then went three-under-par on the back side, starting with a birdie at the 570-yard 11th and following with birdie putts of five feet at the 548-yard 13th and 30 feet at the 565-yard 17th before bogeying the final hole with the three putts.

Gerry's, Optimists Win In First-Round

... OF LEGION TOURNEY

By TOM HENDERSON
Star Sports Writer

Lincoln Gerry's and the Lincoln Optimists passed their first-round American Legion junior baseball district tournament tests Tuesday night, with victories over Roberts and the LAFB Colts respectively.

Gerry's claimed a 5-2 decision over Roberts in the final game of the evening, while the Optimists got a 4-2 verdict over the Colts in the 6 p.m. contest.

The Optimists meet Ken Witt's at 6 p.m. tonight, and Roberts faces the Colts in the loser's bracket of the double elimination district tourney, at 8 p.m. Witt's drew a first-round bye.

Gerry's took advantage of Roberts' hurler Rick Knapp's wildness in the first inning to jump to a quick 2-0 advantage. After getting Del Smith to pop out, Knapp walked three Gerry's batters before giving up a bases-loaded single to Gerry's hurler Mike Delaney, good for both runs.

Coach Dave Myers' Gerry's outfit took a bigger lead in the second, scoring one run on two more walks, a pair of wild pitches by Knapp, and an error. Knapp finished the contest with five wild pitches and 11 bases on balls.

It looked like a rout for awhile, but Knapp got out of the third and fourth without any further scoring, and Roberts began chipping away at the Gerry's lead.

Delaney hit Roberts' second baseman Tom Tidball with a pitch to start the inning, and followed with a walk to speedster Dick Baldwin. Another walk, this one to Chuck Roberts, filled the bases for the Roberts crew.

Delaney then allowed Tom Kos a single to center, driving in two runs and tightening the contest at 3-2.

Delaney fanned 11 Roberts batters, while giving up only five hits. Knapp allowed only six safeties, but was in constant trouble due to his wildness.

In the first contest, the Colts took a 2-0 lead in the first inning, but starting pitcher Kent Lovelace ran into trouble in the fifth, giving up one run before being replaced. Before the inning was over the Optimists had three runs and the victory. The Optimists added another tally in the sixth.

Jerry Husbands went the route for the Optimists, allowing only three hits, while walking two and striking out eight.

Little People 'Have To Think Big:' 250 Midgets, Dwarfs At Meeting

Cloucester City, N.J. (U) — Harriet Hooper, a pert 4 feet, 2 inches, barely stands taller than the children in the second-grade class she teaches at the Browning School in Milwaukee, but she doesn't think her size is a disadvantage.

Charles Sedow of Owatona, Minn., is 4-foot-6, works for an insurance company and believes his small stature is an advantage.

Bob Brower of Phoenix, Ariz., a "tall" 4-foot-10, is controller for a chain of Arizona supermarkets and says simply, "you have to think big."

Little People

These three are members of Little People of America Inc., a national organization started seven years ago to help midgets and dwarfs discuss mutual problems and to meet one another.

You can only join the group, which is holding its annual convention here, if you're shorter than 4-foot-11.

The organization was founded by Billy Barty, a 3-foot-6 actor. There were only 21 little people at the first convention but nearly 250 are attending this one. The organization claims 1,800 members.

The little people as they prefer to call themselves, acknowledged in interviews at the convention that employment is difficult but not impossible for them to obtain.

All Professions

But a spokesman said "they're in almost all the professions," citing as examples dentists, doctors, chemists, teachers, lawyers, artists, barbers, salesmen, engineers and bankers.

Brower, immediate past president of the organization, said "in the United States, we live in a land that worships the football hero. The natural desire of most employers is to accept a person who is both mentally and physically perfect rather than a person who is only mentally perfect."

But, said Miss Hooper, who has taught 10 years, "once you get the job there are advantages to being small, also. It gives a second-grader a great deal of pleasure to look down on me... physically, that is, not personally. I make the rules in my class and the children obey me as they would any other teacher."

One Driver Hurt In 2-Car Mishap

A two-car crash at 33rd and Cornhusker Highway Tuesday night sent one driver to the hospital and did considerable property damage to the vehicles involved.

William L. Norris, 28, of Ceresco, was hospitalized at Bryan Memorial Hospital when the car he was driving pulled out to pass a third car and collided with the car driven by Neil E. Sipp, 29, 3340 Touzalin, who was making a left turn onto 33rd. Both vehicles were westbound, police reported.

The extent of injuries to Norris was unknown, but officers reported them to be minor. Sipp was apparently not injured.

LT&T Earnings Rose During Last Quarter

The Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Co. reported second quarter earnings for the three-month period ending June 30 rose from 38c to 40c compared to the same period a year ago.

Committee OK Given New USIA Nominee

Washington (U) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee gave swift approval Tuesday to the nomination of Leonard H. Marks, Washington lawyer, to be director of the U.S. Information Agency (USIA).

The nomination was approved along with that of Edward Clark, Austin, Tex., attorney, another close friend of President Johnson, to be ambassador to Australia.

Both were questioned at a public session in which Marks testified he would dedicate the USIA to extolling "the American way of life" abroad while it always "tells the truth."

Pittsburgh Native Sens. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., and Hugh Scott, R-Pa., both appeared before the committee to endorse the nomination of Marks, a native of Pittsburgh.

The nomination of Clark, for the Australian post, likewise drew bipartisan endorsement when Sens. Ralph W. Yarborough, D-Tex., and John G. Tower, R-Tex., voiced warm approval.

Tower remarked that a man who could win the endorsement of "a liberal Democrat and a conservative Republican" merited approval.

Yarborough observed that he and Tower have not been "in such unanimity" on a matter since they have served together in the Senate.

Succeeds Rowan

Marks, 49, succeeds Carl T. Rowan at the USIA. Until his appointment July 13 he represented radio-television stations owned by the Johnson family.

He told senators that he is aware of "the vital role of the USIA in explaining U.S. policies, actions and culture."

And he said the communications officers will be helpful of removing "the barriers of suspicion and distrust."

"I realize there is a vital job to perform in explaining our own way of life," Marks said, "and I hope to bring to it direction and leadership."

Actor Davidson's Rites Wednesday

Grand Island (UPI) — Funeral services will be held here at 10 a.m. Wednesday for a former Grand Island man who fell eight stories to his death from a San Francisco hotel Sunday.

The services for James Davidson, a 24-year-old actor, will be held at St. Mary's Cathedral. There will be a private burial in the Grand Island Cemetery.

Police said Davidson, who was living in San Vicente, Calif., fell from a window ledge after telling a companion to "watch me do a trick." Police saw him hanging from the window ledge, but were unable to reach him before he fell.

Davidson, born and raised in Hastings, attended the University of Nebraska.

Police Dig For Nazi Body

Berlin (U) — A dozen West Berlin policemen dug into the backyard of a shipping company Tuesday to check out new information that the body of Nazi war criminal Martin Bormann may be buried there. So far they have found nothing.

Many former Nazis insisted Bormann was killed trying to flee Berlin at the end of World War II; others claim he is alive and in hiding. A top lieutenant of Adolf Hitler, he was tried in absentia at Nuernberg after the war and sentenced to death.

Joachim Richter, a Frankfurt prosecutor, said his office had new information which is sufficient to order the police to dig in search of the body.

He said a number of former Nazis had said they last saw Bormann during the Battle of Berlin at Lehrterstrasse and later some said they saw Bormann's body together with the body of Hitler's personal physician.

The doctor's body was buried in a backyard near Lehrterstrasse. Investigation showed the burial was made by three postal officials on orders from the Russians, who apparently did not know the identities of the bodies.

One of the postal officials was found and he told detectives he buried not one man but two—a tall man who was a doctor and a short man who had no papers on him.

"This led us to believe that the short man may have been said. "The postal official said. "The postal official said he did not recognize the body as that of Bormann but we felt we should check this out because we just have no other leads."

Richter said during the many years of the Bormann investigation, his office has received hundreds of tips on the Nazi's whereabouts and most of them were checked out.

"We even had tips that he was in Anchorage, Alaska, and others that he was in China and South America."

The West Berlin police officers doing the digging were supervised by two pathologists.

Viet Settlement Would Be At Gun Point--Douglas-Home

London (UPI) — Opposition leader Sir Alec Douglas-Home said Tuesday that unless the United States was ready to continue the fight in South Viet Nam "the only settlement would be dictated at the point of a gun."

The former conservative prime minister spoke in the House of Commons in the second day of a major debate on foreign policy.

Attacking Prime Minister Harold Wilson's statement in the debate's opening speech Monday that nobody could win the war in Viet Nam, Douglas-Home said:

"Could Be True" "That could be true, but equally if the U.S. was not ready to fight there, the only settlement would be at the point of a gun."

Douglas-Home said he did not believe that "now when China is so weak relatively to the United States" it would pursue policies which challenged United States power.

The Chinese can afford to wait, he said.

But he said as Red China grew stronger it was willing to use subversion, backed by force, to try to dominate Southeast Asia.

"If they can succeed in ousting the United States and the SEATO allies from Southeast Asia, the smaller countries would be ripe for the picking," Sir Alec said.

"Fiasco" The opposition leader criticized Wilson's commonwealth peace mission on grounds that there was a lack of behind-the-scenes preparation. He said Wilson's dispatch of junior minister Harold Davies to Hanoi was a "fiasco."

He also congratulated commonwealth peace mission member President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana for having "the sense not to go" in response to a North Vietnamese invitation to him to visit Hanoi as an individual.

It was reported earlier Tuesday that Nkrumah had decided not to accept the Hanoi invitation personally. But the Ghana high commissioner in London, Kwesi Armah, left London for Hanoi via Moscow Tuesday.

The opposition leader said that if Britain's foreign policy was being badly directed, that "should be a proper case for censure" of the government.

But in his speech of reply, foreign secretary Michael Stewart challenged Douglas-Home to make it the subject of a vote in Commons, unless his "extremely serious" charge was only a "paper tiger."

Visit Delayed

The University of Nebraska said a five-member Tanzanian farm delegation will not arrive here until around Aug. 1. The group previously was scheduled to arrive July 26.

Aid Income Tax Petition Drive

Omaha (U) — Chairman John J. Cavanaugh of the Douglas County Board agreed to ask other county officials across the state to help in the campaign to place the income tax issue on the 1966 general election ballot.

He did so at a meeting with the co-chairmen of the state petition drive, Dick Herman, who was regional Republican campaign manager for the 1964 presidential election; and democratic national committeeman Marvin Werve.

Several county officials were present at the meeting called by Cavanaugh.

A total of 28,905 valid signatures is needed to call a referendum.

"We think we need about 13,000 signatures from Douglas County," Werve said.

Cavanaugh Will Aid Income Tax Petition Drive

Omaha (U) — Chairman John J. Cavanaugh of the Douglas County Board agreed to ask other county officials across the state to help in the campaign to place the income tax issue on the 1966 general election ballot.

He did so at a meeting with the co-chairmen of the state petition drive, Dick Herman, who was regional Republican campaign manager for the 1964 presidential election; and democratic national committeeman Marvin Werve.

Several county officials were present at the meeting called by Cavanaugh.

A total of 28,905 valid signatures is needed to call a referendum.

"We think we need about 13,000 signatures from Douglas County," Werve said.

PROPULSION LAB PICKED

Pasadena, Calif. (UPI) — The U.S. Space Agency Tuesday named Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL) to manage development of a project Voyager landing capsule to search for life on the planet Mars in 1971.

Earlier, Space Agency officials told United Press International as many as two Voyagers, each weighing 6,000 to 10,000 pounds, probably will be shot at Mars that year, when the red planet makes one of its closest-of-the-century approaches to Earth.

JPL spearheaded the successful flight of America's Mariner-4 space camera, which took the first close-up pictures of Mars last week. However, Mariner-4 was not equipped to find out whether life — either animal or vegetable — exists on the ruddy surface of Mars.

The Voyager program is expected to cost more than $1 billion, 10 times as much as project Mariner, before it is finished.

MEAD VOTERS OKAY OPPD TIE

Omaha (UPI) — Voters of the village of Mead gave their approval to the sale of the town's electrical distribution system to the Omaha Public Power District.

At a special election the vote of 120 for and one against, was announced by C. O. Robinson, chairman of the village board.

The cost of the distribution system was set at $26,733.46, plus an additional $1,145.03 for materials on hand.

The power district will begin serving the retail customers at Mead Aug. 1 with savings of 20-30% to each customer, according to Lynn Monroe of the Omaha Public Power District.

Viet Nam Jitters Hit Stock Market

New York (AP)—Jitters over Viet Nam Tuesday sent the stock market to one of its worst losses of the year. The list began to back away in fairly early trading on news of Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara's statement that the Vietnamese situation had deteriorated in the last 15 months and that recommendations will be made to fill the U.S. commitment to the Vietnamese people.

In late afternoon stocks hit the skids on news that Soviet Communist Party chief Leonid Brezhnev threatened swift retribution against American "interventionists" in Viet Nam and he called for worldwide communist action to "defend the world against imperialist aggression."

The market reacted with heavy selling. Even the aerospace defense stocks, which had been the strongest in the day when the market was mixed—either lost their gains or trimmed them back.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 11.7 to 867.79, its worst setback since June 1953.

The Associated Press average of 50 stocks fell 4.3 to 320.4 with industrials down 5.7, rails down 3.0 and utilities down 1.8. The average of 100 stocks fell 4.8 to 320.4.

Based on the averages, the retreat since the start of the year, the worst of 1965 it came at a time when investment analysts were advising caution because of foreign and domestic uncertainty.

Volume of 4.71 million shares compared with Monday's 3.19 million and was the largest since July 9 when 4.8 million shares were traded.

Thirteen of the 15 most active stocks declined and 2 advanced. The decline was in defense, aerospace, utilities, and in common stocks.

Fairchild Camera was the most active stock, down 1.5 to 127.75. It had gained 2.4 to 129.50 on Monday as it sank 2.4 to 127.75 on Tuesday.

Prices declined on the American Stock Exchange, down 1.5 to 127.75. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 11.7 to 867.79, its worst setback since June 1953.

Corporate bonds declined. U.S. treasury bonds were mostly unchanged.

Commission Considering Buying Land

The State Game Commission is considering the purchase of the 10,000-acre James Ranch in northwest Nebraska as a link in the development of the Fort Robinson area, Commission Director Mel Steen said Tuesday.

"Steen said the James property an integral part of any proposed development at Fort Robinson.

"But Steen noted that further developments on possible acquisition of the large tract hinges to a large degree on a report being prepared by the Federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation.

He said the bureau is studying whether the state or the federal government should develop Fort Robinson, or whether the development should be a joint project.

Steen said he understood field work on the study was completed, but added that he did not know when the report would be released.

He said the James Ranch lies in Sioux and Dawes counties, and links two federal tracts involved in the fort.

Landslide Cuts Tracks, Wrecks Loading Facility

Brownville (AP) — A landslide at Brownville Tuesday covered the railroad tracks between the Missouri River and the base of a high bluff and destroyed the loading dock of the Continental Grain Company.

The slides apparently had stopped Tuesday night but during the day had knocked out a driveway serving the elevator and had crept to within a few feet of the elevator office. The office is some 40 feet from the elevator.

Lifting Rural Economy Discussed By Tiemann

By MARY REIFSCHNEIDER Star Staff Writer

Ways to improve the economic development of rural communities were discussed by N. T. Tiemann, Wausau banker and a possible Republican gubernatorial candidate, at the Lancaster County Teen-Age GOP meeting Tuesday.

Tiemann said, "There's a key to success for every rural community. We need someone with intelligence to develop it."

He explained Wausau's economic development as an example. Ten years ago the community was dependent upon the cash prices paid for grains shipped out; since then farmers began feeding cattle and are adding several million dollars to the town's economy, he said.

The fourth girl, Zeda Mulholland, 18, of Omaha, was sentenced to three years on the assault charge. All were sentenced Jan. 7 of last year.

Two Lincolmites Held In Florida Following Holdup

Panama City, Fla. (UPI) — Two Lincolmites, men were arrested here on charges of armed robbery in connection with the holdup of a Panama City motel.

One of the pair allegedly entered a motel on the edge of town Monday evening and forced a clerk, Patricia Daniels to hand over $80 in cash. The other youth waited outside in a car.

Police said Mrs. Daniels phoned in a description of the getaway vehicle immediately after the pair fled. The arrests were made barely an hour later.

6-Year Term Elimination Proposal Hit

The Nebraska Legislature was told Tuesday that State Tax Commissioner George G. Dworak is unhappy about a lawmaking decision Monday under which the tax commissioner no longer would be appointed for a six-year term.

A rider attached to SB172 at the urging of Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff provided that the tax commissioner would serve at the pleasure of the governor.

Omaha Sen. Henry F. Pedersen Jr. told the Legislature Tuesday that Dworak has reported being offered another position at twice his present salary but would prefer to continue in the Nebraska post.

Pedersen said he feared the Carpenter amendment would make the position "more subject to politics." But his motion to return LB172 to select file for the purpose of striking the Carpenter amendment was defeated 2-26.

"I'm not completely disillusioned about Mr. Dworak, but only partially so," said Sen. Carpenter, protesting Pedersen's move.

"If he can get double the salary somewhere else he's a fool not to leave," said Carpenter.

The senator scolded Pedersen for raising the politics issue. Carpenter said there is "no greater politician in this body" than Pedersen, former Douglas County Republican chairman.

LB172 is the bill creating a new department of revenue.

Carpenter said LB172 and a companion measure, LB173, creating a department of administrative services, are designed to vest administrative responsibility in the governor "where it belongs."

Tortured Liquor Hearing Notification Bill Killed

A tortured liquor hearing notification bill came to the end of its rocky road in the Legislature Tuesday when a bill motion carried 29-14.

Omaha Sens. George Syas and Henry F. Pedersen Jr. introduced the measure, LB540, as the result of incidents in their districts in which interested residents were unaware of, or received last minute and accidental notice of, scheduled liquor license hearings before the city council.

At one time a month ago the bill was killed on the floor, only to be revived later.

Tuesday, Sen. George Syas and Pedersen moved that the enacting clause be stricken from the bill on select file and the motion carried 29-14. The effect was to kill the measure.

Syas said he cannot see why the Omaha mayor and city council cannot handle the problem. He said the act is not needed outside and in other cities, and the statewide application creates a hardship.

Sens. Syas and Pedersen stoutly protested lobbying activity against the bill. They said they accepted every amendment offered by the beer and liquor industry lobbyists only to have them oppose the bill nonetheless. Syas termed it a double cross.

The amended bill would have required written notice to owners of property within 300 feet of the proposed liquor or beer license location.

Public Works Unit Erases Power Bills

The Legislature's Public Works Committee wiped its slate clean of power bills Tuesday, save one measure extending the authority of the Nebraska Power Review Board.

LB289 was held in committee pending the fate of LB764, which would merge the wholesale operations of the Consumers and Loup River Public Power Districts and the Platte Valley Public Power and Irrigation District into one grid system. LB764 now awaits final reading.

The Legislature has adopted a resolution stating that if LB764 is not passed, the authority of the Power Review Board would be extended to accomplish the district merging.

Bills killed Tuesday included LB809, creating a "southeast Nebraska public power district" in Lancaster, Gage, Jefferson, Saline and Thayer counties.

Other bills given the axe were:

LB828—Revising requirements for board representation in power districts.
LB879—Revising law dealing with election of power district directors when system operates in more than 20 counties, to apply to districts either alone or in association with another district or district.
LB760—Declaring public policy as to use of facilities of power agencies.
LB762—Requiring consolidation of power districts engaged primarily in generation and transmission when they jointly own and control electric facilities.
LB868—Requiring joint meetings of Loup and Platte Valley boards to conduct business of the Nebraska Public Power System.

York Reformatory Land Sale OK'd

A bill authorizing the State Department of Institutions to sell at auction some unneeded farm land at the York Women's Reformatory was one of three passed on final reading in the Legislature Tuesday.

The list (E—emergency clause):
LB450—Revising provisions of law covering contracts with another school district for the instruction of pupils. (Whitney, Knight) (40-2).
LB835—Increasing the state's share of motor vehicle registration fees. (Hasebrook, Clausen) (42-0).
LB506—Authorizing the Department of Institutions to auction certain unneeded farm land at the York Women's Reformatory. (Marvel) (E) (41-0).

POSTCARD by Stan

The other day being sunny (and therefore optimistic), I went to lunch with Richard (Area Code 213) 876-0323.

"You won't mention names?" he asked. "I don't want my clients embarrassed."

"Not a name, Richard (Area Code 213) 876-0323," I said.

"Well, then," he said, "it's like this. I'm wearing one, myself."

Richard makes what we used to call toupees—"we prefer the word 'hairpiece'."

He makes them for people you wouldn't believe wore them. Mainly movie people. But a lot of industrialists who are pictured often with the breeze ruffling their lovely locks.

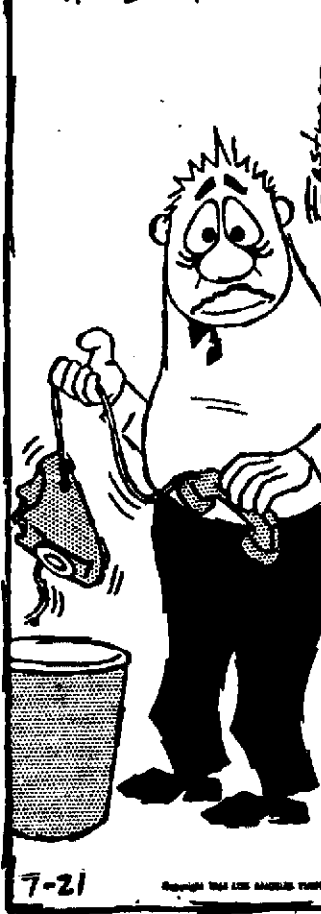

"It used to be that the hair was put on a silk backing," said Richard. "So you could see the front just started with a lot of hair. It didn't look natural."

"Now I use a sheer lace. We put the hair in gradually—the way it grows. And you can see the scalp. It will never blow off. In fact you have to use a mild chemical to get it off."

"You can swim in it. Sleep in it—though I don't advise it."

Richard puts his undetectable lace jobs on full cover jobs. Or he does spot covering.

"We don't make a man look younger," said Richard. "We make him look like his own age—the way he should look with hair."

The idea of hairpieces still has a comic background—remember when all comedies had a scene where the toupee blew off into the soup?

So Richard works from a house with no sign or identification. The neighbors just think he has a lot of friends calling. If you phone him, he makes trips around the country to you.

"I put one hairpiece on an actor (name withheld). And in a week, he came back saying, 'I've got to take it off. I'm being chased all over town.'"

"That's the way a good hairpiece works," said Richard. "Why, the main problem I have is with wives. They see their husband in that new hairpiece, and they get afraid of the competition."

If you get a hairpiece, you actually wear women's hair. Each hair has to be 8 to 10 inches long. They are crocheted into the lace, about 30,000 of them.

Most of the hair comes from Italy where hair buyers comb the market.

"Right now," said Richard, "there is a shortage because of the popularity of women's wigs."

He said he advises wearers to have two—"they must be
